SUMMARY.

The weather in Flanders is described as abominable.

The battlefield is waterlogged by ceaseless rainstorms, but fighting continues.

The enemy strongly counter-attacked northward of Frezenburg, but the Allies' artillery and machine guns swept them down.

The German gun fire was intense over a great part of his lost territory, the long-range guns shelling far behind our lines.

The situation is described as exactly the same as at the end of the first day of the battle.

The Australians and New Zealanders were allotted difficult country on the extreme right of the attack, below Warneton.

When the New Zealanders took La Basseville, it was a mere huddle of broken bricks.

The village had already been taken and lost, but once the New Zealanders became established there they firmly held it.

The Australians, after hard fighting, captured the old windmill near La Basseville. It is an important point.

Waves of Germans advanced across the Warneton-road, and encircled the windmill.

They compelled the Australians to evacuate the position, but after several hours shelling the Australians recaptured it.

The enemy, at great cost, obtained a foothold in the British advanced positions near the Ypres-Roulers railway.

A counter-attack, however, drove him out from all points, and the British completely re-established their former line.

The enemy later made a violent attempt to recover ground north-east of Ypres.

The British in every case broke up and dispersed the advancing lines.

A German official report says:—We repulsed the enemy everywhere in Flanders after heavy fighting.

A high military authority, discussing the battle, says the Germans must not expect a long respite.

Our guns, he remarks, will soon be again hammering them relentlessly.

Field-Marshal Haig's plans, the authority continues, have already been carried out to the fullest degree.

The British advance has aroused enthusiasm in France.

Reports from Paris estimate that the German casualties on the first day of the attack numbered 20,000.

Great artillery activity continues in the Champagne, west of Craonne.

There is a violent artillery struggle on the left bank of the Meuse.

A prominent trade union official says Germany has taken unofficial steps to discover the Allies' peace terms.

A Russian official report states: Between the Sbruch and the Dniester our troops abandoned positions north-east of Khotin.

The enemy assumed the offensive between the Dniester and the Pruth, and occupied a number of positions.

War weariness is reported to be the real cause of the disorganisation of the Russian army.

The London newspapers deeply regret General Brussiloff's resignation.

The Russian Government declares that every measure will be taken to reorganise the army for victory.

The third anniversary of the outbreak of war will be commemorated throughout the State to-day.

The principal function will be a meeting in the Sydney Town Hall at 11 a.m.

There will be a five minutes' stoppage of work in the Public departments, starting at 11.30 a.m.

Trains and trams in the metropolitan and suburban area will stop for half a minute from 11.30 a.m.

The military parade has been postponed owing to the curtailment of the railway service.

So far as the Government is concerned, there were no strike developments yesterday.

Mr. Fuller stated that the representatives of the strikers had not shown any desire to confer. The offer was still open.

The brassmoulders at the Randwick tramway workshops ceased work yesterday.

The moulders at Eveleigh also came out after certain negotiations had failed.

The boilermakers at the Newcastle railway shops, as well as the coachmakers, numbering 400, ceased work.

Evidence is accumulating that among many of the unionists affected the strike was not desired.

The railway and tramway services are to be considerably restricted.

The Sydney and suburban trams will not run on Sunday morning.

The ferry services will probably be curtailed, consequent upon the altered tramway conditions.

There is a grave danger of the strike spreading to the engine drivers and firemen on the railways.

Clerks were employed yesterday in shovelling coal in place of the fuelmen at the Central Station yards.

A number of enginemen thereupon refused to take the engines from the coal stages, as they considered the coal "black."

The Chief Commissioner has arranged to have the railway coal loaded, so as to carry out the reduced train services to-day.

Union officials are of opinion that there is not much likelihood of the tram drivers and conductors joining in the strike.

It is not feared that the trouble will spread to the Ultimo Power-house.

"I am not going to hear the representative of a body of men who are out on strike."—Mr. Justice Heydon in the Industrial Court.

The Inspector-General states that it has been the practice for all uniform men to undergo a course of drill.

No person connected with the military, he explains, is employed as a drill instructor by the Police Department.

The official figures show that in New South Wales 3129 men volunteered during July.

The application by Herbert Keith Shaw for leave to appeal in the Katoomba tragedy case was refused.

The Federal Coal Board will resume, the difficulty in regard to the Richmond main dispute having been overcome.

About 6000 acres of land on the Comboyne are being inspected, with a view to the settlement of returned soldiers.

The Walbundrie Estate, near Culcairn, is to be purchased by the Government for returned soldiers.

The final meeting of the committee of Red Triangle Day was held yesterday. The total received from the collection was £159,037.

About £750 was realised by the Anzac Buffet matinee organised by Miss Ada Reeve.

At the Millions Club luncheon, Mr. J. Garland, M.L.C., expressed the determination of the people to see the war through to victory.

Mr. Fuller gave a sympathetic reply to a deputation of oyster lessees, which asked for the right of renewal of leases.

It was also desired that the size of marketable oysters be reduced.

There were 3147 patients under treatment in St. Vincent's Hospital during the year ended December 31, 1916.

A returned soldier was fined £25 for disposing of a rabbiter's outfit, granted him from the Repatriation Fund.

The market for investment stocks yesterday was active, though the turnover did not equal that of the previous day.

There were strong buyers for Edna May Deep Levels, and shares advanced to 15s 10½d. Other Westonia stocks shared in the rise.

Egg supplies are rapidly increasing, and the market has collapsed.

Best new-laids were sold in wholesale parcels at 11d to 1s a dozen. Case eggs were quoted at 10d.

The main feature in the forage and grain market was the uncertainty of the arrival of supplies.

Forecast.—Some showers along the slopes and in the far south, fine elsewhere; cloudy, south-westerly winds; snow on the tablelands.

HOMESEEKERS, RENTPAYERS,
RENTPAYERS. HOMESEEKERS.
Why do you go on paying rent year after year, with nothing to show for it, when you can OWN YOUR HOME with the money you are now paying as rent every week? We will build a Cottage in any suburb of Sydney cheaper than anyone else, and we use only FIRST-CLASS MATERIALS. If you own the land, we will BUILD WITHOUT DEPOSIT, according to the value of your land. Or, if you have a reasonable deposit, we will buy the land in any suburb you choose and build to your own design. The repayments as rent are very easy, being from 5/4 per week. This includes interest and principal, and you have the right to pay off at any time. There are no legal expenses of any kind, and your rent does not commence until your home is completed. It is a duty every married man owes his wife and family to provide them with a home; something to fall back on if anything happens to the wage-earner, more particularly in these times of stress. We have made SPECIAL PROVISIONS for sickness and misfortune, and if you have saved enough to buy the land, you cannot do better than call and see us about the home to go on that land. Furthermore, we have a list of Estates in almost every suburb from which you can select your home site. You can purchase your land on easy terms if you wish, and when paid off we will build your home without further deposit. We have placed many satisfied clients in their OWN HOMES during the past seven years, and there is no reason why you should not get yours on the same easy terms. RHODE ISLAND REDS. DALRYMPLE'S.
The marvellous show records of my Reds at Royal Easter and N.S.W. Poultry Club Shows clearly show where the best Reds are. The success of my customers in every State indelibly impresses the value of my stock. Make a mental note of this.

Mr. D. F. Laurie, the eminent South Australian Government Poultry Expert, writes:—"I have had many good looks at the pen of Reds you sent for Salisbury Poultry Station. I am delighted with them. One hen is perfection, and the cockerel is splendid."

Now read what Mr. A. Hart, the Victorian Government Poultry Expert, writes:—"Send at once three special birds for Wyuna State Farm and 2 pens for Dookie Agricultural College. Am delighted with your Reds."

Now read what Mr. Coulthard, the leading S.A. Breeder of Reds, writes. He says:—"You will be pleased to hear I won 1st hen and 1st and 2nd pullet at our big show. They were the best Reds yet seen here, and are a credit to you."

This is evidence worth having. This is not moonshine. DALRYMPLE'S CHICKENS, DALRYMPLE'S SETTINGS, DALRYMPLE'S STOCK will help you if your aim is success. I can sell you Stock 21/ each up; Settings 21/ each up, 16 eggs. Chickens 2 guineas per dozen up. Send for Red List and Standard Free. 10 per cent. reduction to all Old Customers. Visitors welcome at all times. J. F. DALRYMPLE, R.I.R. Specialist, Loloma, Forest-rd, Peakhurst. T., Kog. 199.

MACHINERY.

STURTEVANT.

TURBO-UNDERGRATE BLOWER.

There may not be enough steam in your boiler plant, because there is not sufficient draught in your chimney. If not, the Sturtevant Turbo-Undergrate Blower will provide more draught, for that is its purpose.

Economy is also a feature of this Turbo-Undergrate Blower. Cheaper coal, such as screenings, culm, and coke breeze can be used with as much satisfaction as higher grade coal. Further, there is the additional advantage of securing from 10 per cent. to 300 per cent. greater horsepower, without adding additional boilers.

The cost of the set is small. The results are great.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

The Allied Forces—Defection of Russia—Accession of America—Victory Any How—Resuscitation of Arthur Balfour—Willie Redmond—A New Vegetable Garden.

WESTMINSTER, June 15.

The great victory which resulted in the capture of the Messines Ridge—the third of the heights on the Western front which the Germans have held for more than two years, and confidently counted upon as impregnable—was achieved at a fortunate moment. It was preceded by a lull in forward action by the British troops, which the gloomy-minded insisted upon regarding as a signal of defeat. The battles of the Somme and Arras were all very well in their way. But they marked the fullest possibility in face of the desperate stand of the enemy. So the croakers said. In better-informed and more reasonable quarters it is recognised that, from circumstances entirely beyond their control, the Allied armies engaged in the task of freeing French and Belgian soil from the presence of brutal invaders have met with an unforeseen check. Their carefully devised plan of campaign rested in considerable measure upon the assurance that the spring would see a Russian army again on the forward march from the eastward, compelling the attention of a portion of the forces at command of the German Emperor.

In a day, with the suddenness of a peal of thunder, came the Revolution, the deposition of the Czar, and the disorganisation of the Russian armies. Since these things happened Russia has been practically out of the game, with the result that Germany was able to throw upon her Western front masses of men and munitions that would otherwise have been engaged elsewhere. This inevitably gave pause to the British and French Allies, and compelled a reconsideration and readjustment of plans matured in other circumstances. The capture of the Messines ridge shows that, in spite of the defection of the powerful ally on the East, the combined British and French forces on the West can hold their own and continue, even with hastening steps, their appointed task of driving the Germans back to the Rhine and over it.

For the second time in the history of the war the German Emperor finds himself confronted by what he is disposed to regard as "a contemptible little army." After lessons learned, the latest delivered at Messines, he is not likely to repeat the historic phrase in connection with the army of the United States. Its appropriateness in the German mind, was, however, fully admitted when war was declared at Washington. The Press was unanimous in assurance that the new departure was of little consequence. The number of the standing army of the United States was scornfully quoted, and it was demonstrated that small as it was, immaterial among the mighty forces at grips, it could not take its place in the line of battle before the end of the year, when, of course, the war would be triumphantly over, and Germany would be dictating terms of peace to the enemy. It is probable that the events of the past week may have shaken this pleasing delusion.

The adjutant-general on the staff of General Pershing, asked when the American Army would show itself in France, replied: "I cannot say that, but I can say that America is in this war with both feet." The phrase graphically describes the situation on the other side of the Atlantic. Slow to take the final step, America, having once drawn the sword, is, with characteristic energy combined with business aptitude, preparing to wield it. The entire Headquarters Staff of the first army destined for foreign service has arrived in London, and will without delay proceed to the front to prepare for the quartering of men already in training for embarkation. As we found when war was perfidiously sprung upon us, an army of a million men cannot be turned out in a week or a month. But the Americans are past-masters of the art of hustling, and the first detachment for foreign service, composed of the regular army, will speedily be followed by support from the ten million able-bodied men who in a single day registered their names and their willingness to enlist.

The reception given to Mr. Balfour when, quietly entering from behind the Speaker's Chair, he took his seat on the Treasury Bench on his return from the United States, would not be the least gratifying of the many tributes of popular approval received since he undertook his mission. At a stroke he has re-established his personal influence and popularity. It must be admitted that at the time he set out on his voyage these had distinctly waned. He, for many years the idol of the House of Commons, had come to be an almost negligible quantity in its deliberations and decisions. At the Admiralty he was a square peg in a round hole. He evidently was not at home with the service, and fell into the habit of leaving its Parliamentary representation in the hands of the Secretary. His most notable achievement, unforgettable and never-forgiven, was his unhappy statement descriptive of the Battle of Jutland. There was talk of his final retirement from public life, a step averted by transference to the Foreign Office. But even in that more important and more congenial office he has studiously kept in the background. Restored to favour and confidence, Prince Arthur is himself again, and beams upon the responsive House with his old gaiety and good humour.

After reading in the morning papers of Monday the telegram from the King to John Redmond condoling with him on the death of his brother, "who has given gallant service and a noble example in the war," a message supplemented by one from the Prime Minister equally eulogistic, I was looking through a pile of old letters. By chance I came upon the subjoined. The writer is one of the oldest, quite the ablest, of Irish members. The circumstances alluded to were consequent on an outbreak by Willie Redmond, at the time defiant of law and order alike at Westminster and in Ireland. The letter is dated October 18, 1902. The contrast between two stages of Redmond's public life, separated by a space of 15 years, needs no elaboration. "W. Redmond is already under sentence of six months in default of bail to be of good behaviour, by order of the King's Bench. The warrant of the Irish High Court cannot, I think, run in England in default of statute (as the process is so rare power has not been given), but a warrant by justices can by statute be backed in England, and executed here for this is constantly necessary to arrest fugitives. The Government, I learn, are determined to adopt the view of the law I expressed in the House the other day, and will not try to enforce process of the High Court warrant in London. Poor Billy, to whom I told this, is going back to Ireland shortly to get it over him."

Time was when one of the sights of London in June was the beds of geraniums fronting Buckingham Palace. Specially chosen for size and colour, they made a blaze of light cheerfully contrasting with the dowdiness of the palace frontage. Here as elsewhere the war has wrought a startling change. Where once geraniums bloomed potatoes grow. They have taken kindly to their new quarters, and to the companionship of Queen Victoria, seated under her gilded canopy, her head, I am bound to say, averted from the commonplace, if indispensable, crop. The passion for potato planting is national. Rows are seen in other public parks, and in private gardens formerly devoted to the culture of flowers. Reports from town and country are unanimous in promise of splendid crops. A fortnight hence they will begin to be available for relief of the potato famine which at present saddens the majority of British homes.

LAW INSTITUTE.

At Thursday's meeting of the Council of the Incorporated Law Institute of New South Wales, the following were elected office-bearers for the ensuing year:—

President: Mr. A. M. Hemsley (Allen, Allen, and Hemsley); vice-presidents: Mr. A. Consett Stephen (Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen), Mr. D. W. Roxburgh (Norton, Smith, and Co.); hon. treasurer: Mr. A. N. Littlejohn (Vindin and Littlejohn).

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

LONDON, W., June 14.

We are enjoying this wonderful summer. I do not remember such a continuance of warm, fine weather. Everything is in full foliage, and our food is replenished by the abundance of fresh vegetables that come daily upon the market. Potatoes are purchasable at eightpence to ninepence a pound, and by the end of the week they will be quoted at some pence lower. Strawberries are here in good condition and cheap. It has been ideal weather for them, and, I hear, for the fruit season as a whole. It has been a great strain to housekeepers to make a variety when potatoes were cut off the menu, and the potato substitutes as expensive as they have been. Just at the moment veal is the cheapest meat to buy. And we have taken advantage of it. But mutton has been absolutely beyond the limit. Canterbury lamb is two shillings per pound, while English mutton is two and fourpence. Housekeepers have a weary time, for even shopping itself is slow on account of the number of people who carry baskets and do all their housekeeping themselves.

Dress and Millinery.

As it is full summer, there are changes to be made, and everything done upon another footing than that of our icy winter. Even now, you hear people recalling the experiences of the earlier part of this year. I sat for a time in the park last Sunday, a thing I have not done for a long time. It is curious how alike the regular parade is year after year. Only in these days of war the predominance of uniform is remarkable. Hither, when on leave, come the soldiers and sailors, as well as their officers, for the park is a republic. And with the officers come their women. One can fill in many a little war drama by watching the wounded heroes with the groups of pretty women sitting with them. There is the feeling that another week will find them back in the struggle of the fight, and it may be the last time they will enjoy the cool loveliness of the park, the trees, and the beds of old-fashioned flowers—lupins, larkspurs, pink and white candytuft, cornflowers, and the rest. This year the flowers grown are all of a homely nature. It is no time for exotics.

Dress is at its simplest phase considering the time of year. True, what clothes are worn are delicate and transparent, but the style is simpler, and black predominates amongst the best people. If one were to measure by foot rule the amount of yards of ninon, chiffon, lace, or net that is used in the costumes of this summer, it would run into millions. A soft deeply flounced skirt of ninon, with tiny beading edging, the flounces a soft satin foundation, and a bodice of ninon mounted over white chiffon, with a glint of colour used in the camisole, and you have the toilette complete.

Hats are broad-brimmed, of varying design, but all simple and practically untrimmed. They do not cost less for their simplicity, but there is no doubt that the larger hat has the front row of the ballet. And women of all ages wear them. You look positively boiling in a small hat at this time of year, and the large shady hat suits the full skirted frock.

Whole dresses are the rule. The coat frock is retiring before the claims of summer on ninon, and the well printed cotton voiles, which are immensely worn. Striped and flowered taffetas, too, has its innings. I saw a few "barrel" skirts, not a great many. They are worn rather longer than the full skirts; I imagine that they are upon a foundation narrower than the outer skirt. I cannot say that there is anything beautiful about them, but they are new, and a little change from the full, short skirt. Of course, the well hung straight skirt is always the most graceful, and it is worn well by women contented with its simplicity and becomingness of line.

Little wash frocks for office wear are seen on every side. There has come a kind of compromise about them. They look more like coats and skirts than coat frocks, and yet they are put on in one action. The skirt is mounted on to a heading of strong muslin, and there is a kind of camisole attached, on to which the jacket is fixed. It is quite the most cunning thing I have seen. Such costumes are exactly what the office girl wants. They make them as a rule in striped drill pique, in blue, pink and black and white stripes. Worn with these neat washing costumes are white rush hats tied with a suitable ribbon. It is a long time since I saw girls look so neat and well finished.

It is, of course, a great time for white blouses. Embroidered and tucked, they are very dainty things, and no woman can be without them. As the tennis season advances white pique skirts and the neatest of shirts come into wearing; and the white silk knitted sports coats follow. The pity of it is that these white-clad maidens, agile as Nausica, have to play maiden sets. Hardly a man is to be found to make up a fourth. Tennis clubs are really only enjoyable on Sundays, when office men spend what time they can in the courts. Golf is never mentioned. Billiards presumably are only played when there is time after dinner. If it were not for the fashionable charity entertainments and parties for wounded, girls would get no social enjoyments. But they muster strongly whenever there is something to do for any war charity.

THE MINERS.

(BY WILLIE WOMBAT.)

Important successes continue to be the lot of all companies of the Australian Mining Corps. Excellent work of a most arduous kind has now been carried on for nearly a year, and the men are standing the conditions exceptionally well, only a few of the older ones being unable to endure the climatic conditions. Nevertheless, those who have broken down under the strain have done their bit, and done it well.

That the Mining Corps has been a success has been demonstrated by the demand for the services of the companies for important work, and the day may not be far distant when the crowning act of their splendid work may be recorded. All companies have been engaged in most important work of late months, and there has been considerable activity on both sides. However, I am glad to state that the Australian miner has achieved grand results, and that on all occasions he has been too many for his friend, Fritz. Honours continue to come the way of our companies, the first grand coup, as I have previously recorded, having resulted in the officers commanding of all companies being mentioned in despatches. Other decorations have followed, and have already been made public. The latest awards have been to No. 2 Company, the D.C.M. having been awarded to Sergt. M. J. Morrison for gallant work on a night when one of our tunnels was crumpled as the result of "minnie" fire. He rallied a squad of tunnelers, and successfully defended the position against raiders. Cpl. H. J. Fovnert has been awarded the Italian Bronze Medal for gallantry on another occasion of equal excitement, only, perhaps, not under exactly so trying conditions. In No. 3 Company Lieut. Howie gained the M.C. for exceptional work over a long period of hours in dealing with shaft-heads. All these things point to the good work that has been done by the Australian miner, whose name is honoured on the Western front. I would like also to state that I know that the N.Z. Tunnelling Company have done some very fine work in a certain place, and that they are receiving much congratulations from many high sources.

When the day comes that I can tell the whole tale, the mining world of Australia will be proud of their splendid men.

(Since the above was written, the battle of Messines has taken place, and as the cables have informed us, it was a wonderful triumph for the Australian and New Zealand miners, who, for 12 months, were tunnelling there.

Mr. Geo. Hallett, foreman, Overland Telegraph Line, S.A. to Port Darwin, writes from Alice Springs, Central Australia, that Clements Tonic restored him from a long illness. His letter can be easily verified. Clements Tonic is used everywhere.—Advt.

IN THE GARDEN.

SOUTH AFRICAN DAISIES.

The typical scarlet-flowering form of Gerbera jamesoni has for some years past attracted considerable attention from horticulturists, and it is now represented in many metropolitan and suburban gardens by one or more specimens. Soon after this fine plant was introduced into Europe it attracted the attention of French hybridists, who originated many very beautiful flowering varieties showing a remarkable variation of colour in their large, daisy-like blooms. The principal colours in the newer varieties that are now available include cerise, magenta, maroon, orange-red, pink, red, terracotta, pure white, and yellow—a sufficiently wide range of colour to produce a brilliant effect when grown in large or small groups. These strikingly handsome herbaceous plants have large, ornamental leaves, and flower heads borne singly at the apex of slender stems about 18in high. Under favourable conditions they produce a profusion of bloom during the summer and autumn. In the warmer districts August and September are the best months to plant these daisies, and if vigorous, well-rooted young plants are set out now they will soon become established, and begin to bloom. These plants thrive in an open, sunny, and sheltered position, in thoroughly well-drained, friable, fertile soil, but they do well and freely produce their charming flowers in any easily tilled, good ground. If grown in masses the plants should be set out quite two feet apart. When planting, great care must be taken not to set them too deeply in the ground, keeping the "crowns" of the plants slightly above the surface, otherwise the plants will become unhealthy, especially if there should be much rain soon after they are set out. In dry weather the young plants should be regularly watered until they become well established, and older plants should receive an occasional good watering in dry, hot weather. Beyond this attention, and keeping the weeds down about the plants, only ordinary cultivation is necessary.

AQUATIC PLANTS.

In parks and gardens where there is permanent water all aquatic plants indigenous to temperate climates, and the more robust ones that are natives of sub-tropical countries, can be grown to perfection with little skill and trouble. Nothing adds greater or more charming variety to ornamental lakes and ponds than the various aquatics, for when skilfully planted the effect at the flowering period is surpassingly beautiful. It is not generally known that many aquatics, including species and varieties of the lovely nymphaea, can be successfully cultivated in fountains, tanks, and even in fair-sized wooden tubs that will hold water. It is the right season for planting the root stocks of aquatics, and if they are cultivated according to the following directions success will be assured. When grown in fountains and tanks the root stocks should be planted in a quantity of rich soil placed in a galvanised wire (one inch mesh) basket, about 1 foot deep and 2 feet in diameter, and sunk about 1 foot below the surface of the water. Where neither of these is available wooden tubs of any size may be used, but they should not be less than 2 feet deep, and rich soil to the depth of 1 foot should be placed at the bottom. The tubs may either be left on the surface or sunk to two-thirds of their depth in the ground, and may either be arranged in groups at intervals or in a row near the margin of a walk. Grown under these conditions water lilies require fairly regular attention, especially during the hotter months, for, as the water evaporates or is absorbed by the roots, it must be replenished, or the plants will suffer. When placing the root stocks in the soil (mud) the latter should be made firm about them, but the "crowns," from which the leaves and flowers develop, must be left quite free. It may be necessary to secure the root stocks in their position until the root system becomes active, but this is easily done with a few wooden pegs and pieces of ordinary twine. There are many exotic nymphaeas in cultivation, but where room is available a good position should be assigned to the native.

Nymphaea gigantea is one of the most beautiful flowering members of this family in the vegetable kingdom. It has handsome foliage, and each of its large blue flowers is about one foot in diameter.

NOTES.

Many of the winter-flowering sweet peas are now blooming freely, and making an attractive display. An occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots will prove highly beneficial to the plants and help them to continue in that condition for some time to come, and more especially if the seed pods are removed as soon as they form. The last sowing of the spring flowering sweet peas of the season may now be made in the warmer districts, and the first one in the cooler parts.

Some of the early-planted pansies are beginning to produce their beautiful flowers freely, and if they receive similar attention in the way of watering finely developed blooms will be the result. Pansies that are being grown for succession should now be liberally mulched with rich material to protect their surface roots from the influences of drying winds and the increasing power of the sun's rays. If any well-rooted seedling pansies are still in the seed beds or seed boxes they should be planted without further delay, but, of course, only when the soil is in good condition to receive them, and the weather is favourable.

Lawns that are composed of grass that requires nourishing in order to maintain a green sward during the ensuing summer should now be attended to. A simple method of nourishing the grass is to top-dress the lawn with fine, rich soil, or that which has been made fertile by the addition of suitable fertilisers. Bonedust is one of the best and safest for an amateur to use, and this should be thoroughly mixed with the soil composing the top-dressing. Unless the lawn is in a much neglected condition, it is not advisable to top-dress heavily, for that would have a tendency to cause a too rank growth in the grass for a time. For a lawn in an ordinary condition a top-dressing one-quarter of an inch deep will suffice, but for a poor one twice that quantity will not be too much to spread on the grass. As soon as the young grass grows through the top-dressing, roll the lawn, and repeat this after rain or artificial watering, for that will make the surface firm, and result in dense, fine sward.

Seeds of the following annuals and perennials, to provide plants for flowering in spring and summer, may now be sown in the coast areas:—Aster (annual) browallia, calandrinia, chrysanthemum (annual), Canterbury bells, colinsia, convolvulus, coreopsis, dianthus, eschscholtzia, gaillardia, helichrysum, hunnemannia, ipomopsis, larkspur, linaria, lupine, nasturtium, petunia, phlox (annual), pyrethrum roseum, rhodanthe, salpiglossis, scabious, snapdragon, sweet and yellow sultan. It will be soon enough to sow the seeds of the hardier of these flowering plants in the cooler districts in September.

GLASS HOUSE.

Cinerarias, cyclamens, freesias, primulas, and other winter flowering pot plants are putting forth their lovely blooms in great profusion, filling the structure with perfume, and making it look quite gay. If the pots of these plants are well filled with roots give them an occasional watering of weak liquid manure. Towards the end of the month a light shade should be used on the roof of the glass house in the middle of bright days to protect these flowering and other tender plants from direct sunlight. Air should be more freely admitted to the plants in calm, warm weather. The season has now arrived for re-potting vigorous-growing plants requiring that attention. Two sizes more pot room will be ample for the more robust plants, and one size larger will suffice for the less vigorous ones. Use clean, well-drained pots and a free, open compost, which should be richer for soft-wooded plants than the hard-wooded ones. When purchasing bulbs and tubers for cultivation in the glass-house or bush-house the "basket begonias" should not be overlooked. They are an interesting class of plants, with pendulous foliage and flowers of various colours—pink, red, salmon, white, and pale yellow being the prevailing hues. They are admirably adapted for growing in hanging baskets, and when in bloom produce a beautiful floral effect. In preparing the hanging baskets well line each one with sphagnum moss, rough pieces of fibrous peat, or similar material, before the compost, which should be light and rich, for the roots to grow in, is placed in position. Do not cover the tubers with more than one-quarter of an inch of soil, and water must be sparingly given until growth becomes active. If it is desired to have achimenes, gloxinias, and tuberous-rooted begonias (upright growing) in flower early in the season the first batch of tubers should now be potted. A few caladium tubers may also be started to provide plants with ornamental foliage. Use clean pots that have been well drained, and a light, rich, open compost.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H.H.M., Wahroonga.—(1) In pruning your almond tree cut out only the weaker and more useless of those growths that are too crowded in the centre of the tree, and shorten the too vigorous shoots that are likely to prevent the formation of a symmetrical head. (2) The long growths on your apple tree should be well shortened, to encourage the short "spur wood" which produces the flowers and fruit.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The Real Estate Market had a much more buoyant tone about it this week. Activity showed itself in many directions. As the winter months pass and the spring makes its appearance there are brighter prospects in store. Subdivision work in the coming season also promises to bear good results, for already preparations are being made for the offering of quite a number of attractive estates. Salesmen are wisely keeping away from pioneering districts, situated in out of the way centres, where persons who purchased would not reap any benefit for years to come. The public will not, in a war period, be inclined to invest in such land, but rather in the centrally-situated places where a person can invest earnings in a home site, or speculating builders can purchase with a view to building at once. Such subdivisions will, judging by last year's transactions, be again in good demand.

Among the indoor auctions this week the sale conducted by Messrs. Raine and Horne on Thursday will stand out as one of the most successful held for a very long time. The auction room of the firm was crowded. Mr. Rabett who occupied the rostrum, had an excellent list of investment properties to handle. For several of these competition was exceedingly keen, and altogether something over £19,000 worth of properties was disposed of. Mr. Rabett first sold three shops in William-street, city, for £5000. He next submitted Eaglesfield, and the adjoining three properties, on the Darlinghurst-road, in one line. For these there was excellent bidding, and they were finally knocked down at £11,000. A pair of brick houses in Rosebank-street, Darlinghurst, was then offered, and after good competition were sold for £2825. A leasehold property in Morehead-street, Waterloo, was also sold for £280. The cottage property at Rose Bay known as Ermington, in Tivoli-avenue, was passed in at £2300. An offer of £1000 for a cottage investment in Busby-parade, Waverley, was rejected. For a portion of the property in Macquarie-street known as The Astor there were no offers. During the week this firm sold a residence at Roseville for £2150, and a cottage at North Sydney for £615.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman had a small list of properties to handle at their auction on Wednesday, but Mr. Clarence Gorman secured bidding for each of the properties submitted. He sold a cottage home at the corner of Spofforth and Florence streets, Cremorne, for £1200. He had an offer of £1150 for a cottage at Longueville, and an offer of £1000 for a residence at Paddington. A corner business site at Waverley was passed in at £23 per foot.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench, at their weekly auction sale yesterday, had a list of six properties to handle, and one was sold. It was a leasehold cottage property at Neutral Bay, and the price paid was £240. There were no offers for two houses in Phillip-street, city, adjoining the Public Works Department, but for a residence and 2½ acres of land at Epping an offer of £2800 was rejected. A cottage residence at Haberfield was passed in at £1125. There was no bidding for a cottage at Rose Bay. During the week the firm sold a cottage and grounds at Normanhurst for £2100; a shop and dwelling in Oxford-street, Paddington, for £800; a small block of land on the Sunlight Estate, Manly, at about £8 per foot (£310); an allotment, Artarmon Estate, Artarmon, at £5 per foot (£250); a block, Pearce Estate, Baulkham Hills, at £45 per acre; and for three lots in Terry's first subdivision at Epping 50s per foot was obtained (£495); while for three lots in the Chesterfield Estate, Epping, £178 was secured. There is a big demand for land at Epping. The district is making steady progress; in fact, it has grown wonderfully during the last few years, and is destined to become one of the most important suburbs in this health-giving district, so strongly recommended by medical men for persons who are inclined to be delicate.

Mr. C. H. Crammond this week sold a property at the corner of Liverpool-road and Little King-street, Ashfield, for £2250; also a cottage, Bowden-terrace, Meadowbank, for £1000; a dwelling, Myrtle-street, Petersham, for £625; and a cottage and land, Vernon-street, Petersham, for £465.

Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that inquiries continue to be received for farmlets. During the week several were selected at Toongabbie and Bankstown, principally by soldiers' wives and mothers. In these cases special terms and conditions were given by the firm for areas thus chosen for the boys at the front. Seaside blocks were also in demand; a number of choice sites changed hands at Woy Woy and Pittwater. Good business was also done in building lots, Concord, Kogarah, Balgowlah, Five Dock, Auburn, and Bellevue Hill being the principal districts chosen.

Stanton and Son, Ltd., during the week sold the following properties:—Brick cottage in Second-avenue, Canterbury, for £775; the Burwood Hotel and two shop properties in Burwood-road, Burwood, for £7500; brick cottage, in Nicholls-avenue, Haberfield, for £1150; vacant land, in Jesmond-avenue, Petersham, for £145; 50ft vacant land, Zoeller-street, Concord, at 35/ per foot; brick Cottage, in Macquarie-street, Rozelle, for £1175.

Stanton and Son, Ltd., at their next sale, to be held at the association rooms on Tuesday, the 14th inst., will submit land in bankruptcy at Read-street, Waverley; also cottage, Strathaven, Reed-street, Cremorne; two lots, Maroubra Beach Estate; a terrace investment, in Louisa-st, Summer Hill; a residence and 9 subdivision blocks in Ninth-avenue, Campsie; cottage, Strathisla, Birrell-street, Bondi, corner business site, Cooper-street and Parramatta-road, Strathfield; two weatherboard cottages, in Cooper-street, Strathfield; and two building sites in the same street.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. (Mr. A. T. Carpenter), sold by public auction and private treaty the following properties during the week:—Cottage, Belmont-road, Mosman, £765; cottage, Albert-avenue, Chatswood, £1200; and allotment, Hardy-street, Bronte, £180.

During this week Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves disposed of 250 acres of land, near Picton, for £1100; also five allotments in the South Katoomba Golf Links Estate for £186; and a weatherboard cottage at Rose Bay for £375.

On Tuesday next an auction will be conducted by Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves, at the rooms of the association, when a number of properties will be submitted, including those at Petersham, Hunters' Hill, Ryde, Rose Bay, Kirribilli, Abbotsford, Wollstonecraft, and Killara.

On Saturday, August 18, Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will offer a subdivision at Arncliffe in the Phippard Estate. These are business sites and cottage blocks, and there will also be offered an attractive villa residence fronting Eden-street. Those wishing to speculate in Arncliffe should inspect this estate, as it is in a good position. Arncliffe is a suburb that is making steady progress.

There is still considerable inquiry for plans, etc., in the Verge Estate, which will come under the hammer on August 18, at Kempsey. The list includes some very fine farms on the Macleay River, as well as town lots in the best parts of Kempsey.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will, at Epping, on August 25, conduct a subdivision sale of the Bulkira Estate, which consists of 26 choice building sites, fronting main roads on Brigg's Hill. This is a healthy locality, and from the land there are excellent views. The sale should prove attractive, for land near the station is getting scarce at Epping.

Stanton and Son, Ltd., will auction Parkview Estate, at Strathfield-Concord, on Saturday, August 25. This estate comprises two cottages and 32 allotments, fronting Ada, Melbourne, Alexandra, and Cole streets. Terms have been arranged at £5 per block deposit. The distance is six minutes from the Strathfield station.

A meeting, convened by the Property Taxpayers and Ratepayers' Association will be held in the city Town Hall on Tuesday, when State economy will be advocated. The subject of fair taxation generally will be discussed, and a protest entered, particularly against the super-tax.

The Government, which owns large tracts of land at Maroubra, beyond Kensington, known as Church and School lands, is preparing for several important auctions of this property, in the coming season. Surveys are now being conducted, and everything points to the opening up of very fine residential areas in the near future in what is now acres of wild scrub, and yet close to the city.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

IN MESOPOTAMIA.

"In Mesopotamia," by Dr. Martin Swayne, which has opportunely reached Australia on the heels of the commission's disclosures, is a remarkably interesting book. The author was on the staff of a hospital unit which was sent to Mesopotamia after service at the Dardanelles, so he is in a position to compare the two adventures. He is an accomplished artist, and illustrates his record with sketches, which reproduce all the colour and brilliance of the East. He is a writer of distinction and humour, with an unusual talent for description. And, last but not least, he is a member of a branch which suffered most cruelly from the bungling in high quarters. He blames no one in particular for the deficiencies; apparently the responsibility was so widely diffused that it was impossible to fix it upon any one man. But his plain, unvarnished tale often makes one wonder how the expedition escaped utter disaster. When the author's unit reached Mesopotamia the campaign to relieve Kut was at its height, and the sick and wounded were coming down the river in thousands. The journey from the front was a terrible one; a convoy was exceptionally lucky to make it in three days; if it ran aground at the Narrows, of bad repute, the time would be doubled. The casualties were packed like sardines in barges lashed on each side of a tug, which continually cannoned against the river banks at the sharp bends, and jolted the sufferers abominably. They lay under a single thickness of awning, which was quite inadequate to protect them against the Mesopotamian sun in midsummer. No extra canvas could be obtained, and substitutes were forbidden, because of their liability to fire. For the bad cases there was nothing but tinned milk; for the rest there was ordinary bully beef, bread and jam, and an occasional egg. There was no intermediate diet; those who were not equal to the bully beef must starve. No wonder that when the casualties reached Basra their appearance "defied description," to use the author's own words. "Like the Gallipoli lot, only worse, they were lean, gaunt, haggard skeletons, hollow-eyed, with rivulets of perspiration furrowing the dirt of their faces. These strange spectres that staggered off the boat cheered up considerably in a day or two, and when it came to censoring their letters not a word of complaint did one find, nor, for the matter of that, any news."

The hospital and its staff were terribly overtaxed—and Dr. Swayne's experiences seem to have been those of every other medical unit. There was accommodation for 200 cases, but the number actually in hospital was always double. These were shuffled like a pack of cards. Long before they were fit to be moved they were sent back to other hospitals in order to make room for new arrivals. Overcrowding was only one element in the disabilities under which the hospitals laboured. Even more serious was the lack of supplies. There was very little ice to be had, and no fans, electric or otherwise, to ventilate the sheds. Worst of all, there was no adequate provision for water. Imagine what this means in a land where for days together the shade temperature climbs to 125 degrees. The turbid water of the river near the banks was undrinkable; in the centre the stream was clear, and later a pipe line was built to catch this middle layer, which consists of Euphrates water.

If Dr. Swayne were asked to define the factor that made life in Mesopotamia so intolerable he would sum it up as "nerves." Many things contributed to it, too much work, unsuitable food, lack of any sort of amusement—but chief of all was the heat. A brazen sky by day, a breathless night with no coolness in the air, a climate, the only alternations of which were the Turkish bath and the furnace, produced depression and hysteria in the most equable. Those who remember Rudyard Kipling's stories of India in the hot season will understand. An awful lethargy, a dull fatalism overwhelmed everyone; everyone had positively to fight against his apathy. The only relief lay in work and yet this solace produced a reaction of frayed nerves. The heat had its subtle psychological effect, and very often its physical effect as well. Heat-stroke became appallingly common, especially among the reinforcements, fresh straight from England, unused to hot climates," who were now arriving in big batches. The author knows of no other malady so dramatic in its suddenness or so painful to witness, except perhaps, acute cholera. It would have been better if these British lads had been less tough and less proud. They went on even when they "felt bad," which made their collapse the swifter when the blow came. The doctors could do little; a "heat-stroke station" was prepared on the river bank, with baths and an ice-chest. The victims were placed in cool water, and slapped and punched and laved till they began to turn blue, and the temperature fell. "Fear played a powerful part in the malady. It tended to produce it and to cause relapses, and it was good practice to use counter-suggestion whenever the patient was conscious." These words recall "On Greenowe Hill," when Mulvaney and Ortheris fought for the life of the heat-stricken Learoyd, and used "counter-suggestion" very effectively. There were many such scenes in Mesopotamia.

For the rest, Dr. Swayne gives a very vivid description of the land and its people; of Basra which, with its lines of great ships anchored in mid-stream, and its swarms of tugs and lighters, oddly resembles the port of London at a distance (the resemblance ceases on closer acquaintance); of the riverine plains, where nothing moves under the brassy sky, and the palm fronds seem made of metal; of the Arabs, sullen and watchful; of the mirages which baffle even the most expert. The mirage is a serious problem from a military point of view; the Turks and Arabs know the mirage areas, and keep to them, making it impossible for the British gunners to get the range. Mirage distorts everything, sometimes with good results. At the battle of Nasireyah the British were outnumbered, and within an ace of defeat. A horde of Arabs was waiting to fall on whichever side lost; we had no reserves; a Turkish victory would have meant the evacuation of Basra, if not of Mesopotamia. When the battle was at its most critical stage a swirling column of dust came across the plain with a flashing of wheels and a thunder of hoofs. Artillery! Batteries, yea, brigades of artillery. The Turks were not inclined to face this new development, and fled precipitately; the Arabs changed their minds and fell vulture-like on the retreating Turks. The Turkish commander committed suicide. The artillery, on closer approach from the mirage-belt, resolved itself into an assortment of waggons and spring-carts, which a doctor had brought up hurriedly to collect the wounded. Mirage is to the eye what rumour is to the ear: it shows you what you most wish to see, and also that which you most fear to see. Rumour, remarks the author, must be "a woman of temperament, for when she smiles she is so charming; but when she frowns, who is so ugly?" Rumour and mirage alike held carnival in Mesopotamia. (Hodder and Stoughton.)

WITH THE RED CROSS.

Although much has been written about the early days of the war on the French front, "The Tale of a Casualty Clearing Station," by "A Royal Field Leech," contrives still to relate some novel experiences and to present new points of view. The author was a member of a unit which was sent to Flanders with the original expeditionary force. He and his colleagues had seen service in South Africa. They realised, of course, that the conditions in Europe would be very different, but none of them realised how little their previous campaigning would help them in this war. The miscalculation was not confined to this unit, as we know now. In South Africa a field hospital could take things easily; even when there had been a reverse there was no need for a headlong race to avoid capture. But in Flanders and France they came to appreciate the speed with which a victorious enemy could advance in a country well equipped with roads and railways, and the author's chief impressions during the first period of his narrative are a nightmare of continual packing up and departure at the eleventh hour before communications were closed.

A clearing station is a mobile link between the fighting-line and the base. It advances and retreats as the tide of battle flows. This station was soon to learn the significance of mobility. They first came into touch with the front at the beginning of the retirement from Mons. The troops that passed before them were weary, but there was no sign of confusion. The columns went by in perfect order, and there was at that time, at any rate, no reason to doubt that the retreat was strategical. But later they found that when the stream of traffic of several divisions is interrupted and turned back on itself the results are rather bewildering. It was hard to get definite instructions. "When the army doesn't know what it wants to do, how can a wretched C.O. of a clearing hospital, whose duty it is to follow, decide upon his movements." Eventually he came to the philosophical conclusion that his orders depended on the German, not the British command, and was content to "carry on" at the job immediately before his hand, without much thought for the morrow. One admires the adaptability and the talent for improvisation which these clearing stations displayed in the face of difficulties. They would be dumped down somewhere with their decreasing equipment; they would proceed to create a hospital out of nothing. The clearing station cannot be satisfied with the rough and ready attention which a casualty receives at the front. It must attempt some definite and conclusive treatment; it must operate continuously; it must be an establishment capable of keeping a case until he is convalescent. Yet such an establishment has to be built up at a moment's notice, and those who build it up do not know whether it is to be there a month or a day, or an hour. If things are going badly it will have to be evacuated with scanty warning; if they go well it will also have to be evacuated, though more leisurely. The clearing station moves forward and the improvisation may become a base hospital, with real women as nurses. The author's experiences are described with vigour and humour, and a keen eye for character; in the midst of their most harassing annoyances his colleagues and himself found a tonic in their patients whose fortitude made them remember that their own trials were trifling in comparison. (Blackwood.)

The author of "A Casualty Clearing Station" is singularly free from self-consciousness or egotism; the word "I" does not occur once in his book. This can hardly be said of "Nursing Adventures," by "A R.A.N.Y. in France." This lady was seeing war for the first time; its horrors struck her as extremely revolting, and she is at first occasionally preoccupied with the analysis of her own emotions. Later, as she admits, she became at once more hardened and more sympathetic, and is handsome enough to admit her mistakes. For instance, there was an English Tommy who was shambling, nervous, and frankly anxious to keep out of the shell zone. He had been through a heavy bombardment. The author contrasts his moral unfavourably with the gallant bearing of other soldiers (who had not yet been in the fighting line). Later she understood.

Her narrative contains some interesting chapters. She was in Antwerp a little before its fall. The more one reads of the attempt to defend it the greater fiasco does it appear, and the more unjustifiable the loss of life which attended its failure. The author made good her escape from one side of the town as the Germans entered the other. She was not so lucky at Ghent, where she was haled before the German authorities. Her crushing replies seem to have reduced them all to submission; perhaps they were glad to get rid of her. At any rate, she returned to England by way of Holland, and then came back to the front. One aspect of her activities was the care of women and children. The military hospitals, with the best will in the world, could spare neither time nor space for these. The ghastly procession of wounded had the first claim on their attention. The R.A.N.Y. filled the breach, saved many a little flickering life, and presided over the entry into the world of many a little patriot. The author is very concerned to point out that in war, as in peace, the sphere of woman's usefulness is illimitable, but this is a truth that needed no demonstration. (Heinemann.)

AN ARTIST ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

A sign of the authorities' somewhat belated recognition that judicious publicity is desirable in war as in peace, was their appointment of Mr. Muirhead Bone as their semi-official artist at the front. His fine sketches appeal to an audience who have no patience to read the conventional official communiques, and his pictorial impressions of the war are the more convincing because they have no need to make use of the overworked adjectives of the writer. His latest two portfolios are particularly interesting, because they remind us that, although the Western front is bounded on the south by Switzerland, its northern limit is the Arctic Circle, and its other limit the upper air. These two instalments deal with the navy and the air service, the latter of which includes aircraft, and also guns, which climb mountains higher than Mont Blanc in their trajectory.

Mr. Bone feels that some explanation may be necessary for the inclusion of the navy in a series of pictures concerned with the Western front. But "our Western front is a line that does not really end at the sea. If it did, then its left flank might be turned. But its real left flank is not there. It is somewhere far out on a line that runs from Nieuport, through and beyond the North Sea. The soldier in Belgium and France may not see much of the navy itself, but every day brings him some proof that the navy is holding its part of the line. In the soldier's mind that long left flank of ours is not forgotten, but rather written off once for all as unbreakable." Although it is written off, it is not underrated. Each service has a high respect for the endurance and courage of the other. Sailors of all ranks periodically visit the trenches; soldiers of all ranks return the visit. Each comes back more firmly convinced that the other branch has the harder time of it. The soldier is struck by the high proportion of deaths among the casualties in naval war, and by visions of night duty at sea in bad winter weather. The sailor is horrified at the soldier's miserable lot in not being able to "go below" into some small cubic space of warmth and dryness when action is over or a watch is through.

This generous mutual appreciation has found a worthy interpreter in Mr. Muirhead Bone, who can draw our "safe buckler" as well as our land frontier. There are other pictures, less directly inspiring to the imagination perhaps, but wonderful in technique. Such are "H.M.S. Lion in Dry Dock" and "A Boiler-room on a Battleship." Here in the intricate tracery of an amazing tangle of lines, curves, and shadows, Mr. Muirhead Bone has captured the poetry of engineering as few have ever done before him. The comparison with Mr. Joseph Pennell is obvious, but Mr. Muirhead Bone's art is individual. Mr. Pennell is more impressionistic in technique; Mr. Bone is more definite, and at the same time equally suggestive.

Mr. Bone's technical skill has even greater scope in the series of pictures devoted to the workshops where aircraft and guns are made. Here he leads us into a very inferno of industry. The machines are in many cases controlled by women, and Mr. Bone is enthusiastic in his tribute to the work of women "on munitions," a broad term, covering not only shells, but everything which depends on engineering. "In these better days," he observes, "it is no harm to speak of the time when the Marne had been won, and yet our army in France was within an inch of its life. The thread of its fate had frayed very thin; only one strand remained; at last, not even that—what had taken its place was a gallant sham, a last forlorn bluff, scarcely a hope." That was when the British gunners sat by their empty caissons, waiting for the scanty supplies doled out, and when the British aviator rose like a solitary intrepid sparrow-hawk for the assembled vultures to fall upon. Thanks largely to the work of the women that time has passed. "Then came the ancient reward of those who fight on without hope. Like a storm that had blown itself out, the strain was suddenly gone. The strong had not known all their strength; the weak had steadfastly hidden their weakness, and they had worn out the strong." (The War Office: Country Life.)

THE GEISHA.

"The Geisha Girl" is not Mr. T. Fujimoto's first essay in English. Already he has published a book, "The Night Side of Japan;" the exquisite artlessness of its diction sometimes made one fear that it was calculated. But Mr. Fujimoto's second attempt dispels the idea. He is as fluent but more conventional, and though he is to be congratulated on his growing proficiency in our language, one regrets the loss of the quaint turns of speech which embroidered his earlier work. The Geisha are the music-hall "stars" of the Eastern world who appear at only semi-private entertainments. From their childhood they have been trained in the rigours of the Oriental style of dancing—so monotonous to watch, so exhausting to do, so full of symbolism in every movement to those who know the meaning. They have sat at the feet of the professors of the humanities, for the geisha, to reach the highest rank in her business, must be well versed in literature and history and must be able to bandy apt academic repartee with the grave seigneurs of the Samurai. Her charms do not depend only on youth and vigour, but on the qualities of her mind. M. Fujimoto suggests that even when the eyes grow dim and the physical charms fade, the geisha continues to hold her salon by virtue of her clever tongue and her ripe wisdom. The average earnings of this type, he says, are more "than the salary of a Government official of the higher rank." But the expenses are heavy. All geishas are apparently harassed by a superfluity of parents, sisters, brothers, and cousins, who live on their bounty. There are also the expenses for the dressmaker, the telephone, the tips to various parasites, the subscriptions to charity bazaars and religious festivals; the tax-collector gobbles up a portion of the residue. "How hard it is," observes the author, "to earn such a big sum by a young, weak woman." There are compensations in the fact that the popular geisha's friends are always glad to renew acquaintance, and there is nothing to be ashamed of in doing so. Those who "have since risen to be Cabinet Ministers, great statesmen, generals, and merchant princes" send for the ex-geishas to organise their domestic entertainments and spend a pleasant half-hour in gossiping over old times. (Werner Laurie.)

NEW NOVELS.

The history of a young man's sentimental evolution may be engrossing to the individual concerned, but is apt to strike the outsider as rather tedious. This is the chief defect of "House Mates," by Mr. J. D. Beresford. Wilfrid Hornby is quite a normal lad; even in the seclusion of the country rectory he has, in the course of nature, several harmless "affairs." The objects of his devotion are older than himself; to some of them he has hardly spoken—every reader can reconstruct this portion of the book from the memory of his own adolescence. Later, in London, Hornby's education continues. He is mightily interested in his experiences, not realising that they are commonplace symptoms of youth. The story becomes more alive when Hornby serves articles in an architect's office, and becomes engaged to an insincere conventional damsel whose principal (if unconfessed) attraction is that she has money. When she jilts him for a more eligible admirer Hornby's pride is wounded, but his heart remains quite unbruised. In fact, soon he comes to regard the breaking of the engagement as an unqualified blessing, for it gives him a chance of escape from a dull and conventional environment which would eventually have stifled his native originality. Hitherto he has held haughtily aloof from the inhabitants of the house in which he lodges. Now, emerging from his shell, he discovers an unaffected interest in his fellows, and cultivates their acquaintance. They are a heterogeneous group—a couple of nondescript Germans, self-effacing and undistinguished but for their taste in music, a dramatic critic, a lady of the pavement, two or three aspirant actresses, a militant suffragist, an Australian couple who are trying to float a mine. Mr. Beresford makes us quite interested in this little world through association with which Hornby gradually becomes less self-conscious, more positive, and more human. His marriage with one of his "house-mates" rounds off his development. If the first half of the book is dull at times, the second is interesting. The characterisation is good; Judith, Miss Whiting, Helen, Mrs. Hargreave, and the rest of them are all true to type. The Australians are more convincing than the usual Australian who appears in English fiction. They might actually have come from Australia; only once do they make a slip that betrays them. They talk about the snow on Mount Townsend, when nine hundred and ninety-nine Australians out of a thousand would speak of Mount Kosciusko in this connection. (Cassell; Dymock's.)

The name of Louise Brown is unfamiliar; if "Paul Strange" is a first attempt, as one imagines it is, she has made a promising debut. The setting is Australian; the characters are within the range of everyone's experience. There is the hero who spends his youth on a South Australian selection, where his detrimental father does something to redeem his uselessness by giving the boy the rudiments of an education. Meanwhile the mother, the patient, self-sacrificing drudge (who does not know the type?), slaves and pinches to put by a little hoard, so that when the time comes Paul may be able to emerge from the rut and carve out a career. Paul finds a guide, philosopher, and friend in the person of a kindly professor, into whose holiday camp he strays. Paul is a resolute young fellow; the professor has only to show him the way to the bottom of the ladder and he climbs by himself. His earliest aspiration was to be "Premier," and law is the stepping-stone to politics. He has the generous ideals of youth and the enthusiasms of the political neophyte. He suffers disillusion. Even the irreproachable Labour party, to whom he has given his allegiance, in the upshot proves to be as opportunist and as cynically eager to listen to the counsels of expediency as its rivals. Paul Strange is no Quixote, but he has the ordinary man's distaste for intrigue and the shady arrangements of party government. The plot is well worked out, and the author is evidently conversant with Australia and its Parliaments. Some of the characters are admirable—the professor, for instance, who is absent-minded in non-essentials, but very wide-awake when important things are concerned. Lest Melbourne professors should consider themselves unduly flattered or Melbourne politicians themselves unduly slandered, Miss Brown assures us that her portraits are all imaginary. The novel is a good one; from the Australian point of view an additional merit is its lack of self-consciousness. There is no attempt to drag in local colour; the Australian setting is accepted as a matter of course, not as an exotic phenomenon to be advertised, or to be authenticated by frequent references which show the author's familiarity with the Antipodes. (Hodder and Stoughton; Dymock's.)

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

The Gonsalez direction, with final performances of "La Boheme" and "Rigoletto" at the Hippodrome to-day, will close for a few weeks their Australian operations. Since August 28 of last year this excellent combination has given no fewer than 120 performances in Sydney. In the first season under the Fuller management at the Grand Opera House 78 performances were recorded, with 28 more for the return season at the same theatre this year, followed by an extension of 14 more at the Hippodrome. The acoustic qualities of this building have now been proved to be admirable, but our audiences are not habituated to such a large auditorium. Although more than 2000 people were present at the Italian Red Cross Society's benefit on Wednesday, hundreds and hundreds of seats still remained vacant. A good deal of interest will be taken in the future movements of the artists. The Messrs. Gonsalez propose to rest in Sydney for three weeks, and then tour various provincial centres before revisiting the Philippines and Eastern capitals. They retain Messrs. Scamuzzi, Dagradi, Bellont, Cacialli, and Foli (manager), and all their lady principals, as well as the chorus; and meanwhile they will secure other artists in Italy for Sydney and Melbourne seasons beginning about next May. Messrs. Ben and J. Fuller are also considering an Italian season for next year, and have empowered Count Filippini to engage artists. That baritone will be associated with the principal tenors, Messrs. Cappelli and Balboni, and he is now cabling to his agents in Italy. He will shortly leave for America and Italy to engage two sopranos, two 'mezzos, a contralto, two baritones, and a basso. The war will obviously make negotiations difficult. Meanwhile both tenors will be busily employed. The Fullers will probably star Mr. Cappelli in concerts. The Kennedy family of well-known musicians will star Mr. Balboni in classic concerts opening at the Melbourne Auditorium on August 14. A strong party has been formed consisting of Keith Kennedy (violin), Laurie Kennedy ('cello), Lance Kennedy (flute), Miss Dorothy MacBride (soprano), and Mme. Kennedy (accompanist.

The writer of "A Woman's Letter" comments upon her visit to the Court Theatre, London, to see Violet Pearn's satirical drama "Hush," dealing with the desire of the modern girl to shock her elders. It shows how one of the "Daughters of Regeneration" writes and produces a play, the staging of which, with her betrothed's parents (an old-fashioned country vicar and his wife) in a stage-box, is shown in the drama. The point of the central situation is that a bride brings home a cradle, and various "baby belongings," and parades them before the prospective grand-parents—who are shocked, as she intended they should be. All this, and variations on it, sound particularly feeble, but the author must be clever, as our correspondent remarks:—"It was killingly funny, and one laughed as one has not laughed at a play for years. I expect it will run some time, though as a piece of dramatic art it wants a good many cuts and trimmings up, for it seems hastily put together. "The flats do not always join" to speak in theatrical slang. Given some pruning and condensation I think there is no chance of "Hush" being "hushed up" for some time. Mr. H. B. Irving has closed his "Hamlet" season at the Savoy, and now fills in some time with "The Bells" and "Waterloo" before putting on a play by Mr. Vachell. Sir George Alexander closes his "Aristocrat" and puts on a play in which he himself does not appear. Then there is a good American play coming on in a week or so. Mr. Hawtrey will close the Prince of Wales's, and go away for a holiday. It is difficult in such times to cast plays. Our young actors are either at the front or training to go there. We shall fall back upon two repertoire companies of Opera, Sir Thomas Beecham's and the Carl Rosa Company. Sir Thomas Beecham comes to Drury Lane, a very suitable house for opera on a grand scale. The Carl Rosa is housed at the Garrick. These English opera companies are more valuable than is often realised. It is the only chance for young people with voices to get any operatic work, and, judging from what I know of them, these two enterprises play a very important part in the operatic art of the future."

Although the Cherniavskys do not reappear in Sydney after to-night's farewell at the Conservatorium, their Australian tour is by no means ended, as they visit Hobart, Launceston, Bendigo, Ballarat, and Adelaide before giving final concerts in Melbourne. Their return to the Auditorium is due to the success of their season there a few weeks back, when they gave eight concerts. During their recent season in Brisbane a good deal of comment was excited by the fact that all four brothers were figuring in the picture-film "The Vagabond" with Charlie Chaplin. They were easily recognised as the young men who joined in "dumb-crambo" consternation at the fainting of the heroine. This merely arose from their friendship with the comedian, who, in private life, is a handsome, well-dressed, well-mannered young man, a clever amateur violinist, and enthusiastic lover of music. He takes a great interest in the Cherniavskys and their art, and as they were passing through Los Angeles he took them to his studio to watch him rehearsing a film, and then invited them to go on. According to these artists, one of the largest concert halls is the San Francisco Exhibition, somewhat of a ramshackle place. The most luxuriously appointed hall in the United States is the Carnegie, New York, which seats nearly 4000. On reaching America, the brothers will take a holiday, and will then give concerts on the way to New York, where on December 20 Mr. Jan Cherniavsky (the pianist) will marry Miss Marie Rogers, daughter of the millionaire sugar king, B. T. Rogers. His estates are in Fiji, and it was there that the young people fell in love at first sight, and hope now to falsify the Shakespearian dictum that "the course of true love never did run smooth."

Mr. F. L. Hailes, of Richmond (Vic.), having read in the Melbourne "Leader" an allusion to our discussion on "Les Huguenots," kindly switches a flood of light on to its local history in Melbourne, leaving unassailed our modest statement that in Sydney, at any rate, it had not been staged until the Gonsalez revival for about 40 years. Mr. Hailes remembers the opera at the Melbourne Opera House in July, 1880, when it led to a tragedy in which a citizen shot at his wife and one of the leading artists, and then committed suicide—names and other details are forwarded. Signor Hazon conducted it at the Theatre Royal with the Simonsen company and a much better cast in 1887, and after that it was revived in 1891 with Mmes. Boema and Cavalieri, M.M. Vilalta, Iorio, Sisco, Travaglini, and others. Meyerbeer's showy opera was not again performed until last year by the Gonsalez company.

The New York "Evening World" of June 17 publishes a portrait of the Sydney contralto with the statement:—"Eva Mylott, known to the concert stage here and abroad as a contralto with a voice of rich quality, was married yesterday to Hutton Gibson by Rev. Mr. McGoldrick, of St. Michael's in Flushing, L. I. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. H. A. Currie (Marie Narelle). The bride is a native of Sydney, Australia. Mr. Gibson is the New York representative of the Gibson Brothers' Manufacturing Company, Chicago, of which he is a member." On their honeymoon holiday the bridal pair were to visit Atlantic City, the Catskill Mountains, the Adirondacks, and Lake Champlaine, not reaching their home in New York until September next. Mrs. Gibson, it may be added, was born at Moruya (N.S.W.), where her mother still lives.

Hartley Manners's war drama has been successfully produced at the King's Theatre, Melbourne, by J. and N. Tait's comedy company, with Sara Allgood as 'Aunted Annie, an East-end factory girl haunted by the sufferings of our men at the front. She goes there as wardsmaid, rises to assistant nurse, and tours England as a recruiting speaker. Miss Tien Hogue, Miss Doris Gilham, Messrs. Leslie Ryecroft and Cecil Brooking were effectively prominent.

Parsons (re-elected); hon. treasurer, Miss Booth (re-elected); Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Hedley-Parsons, Miss Barling, Miss Solomons, Miss Mason; hon. secretary, Mrs. Duret. The Missionary Society for University Women will hold a sale of work on August 11 at the Y.W.C.A. Hall, Castlereagh-street, in aid of the Missionary Settlement Hostel at Bombay, and the work of the Y.W.C.A. amongst Indian women students. An interesting feature will be the representation of an Indian zenana, with a display of exhibits. Lectures will be given by Dr. Knowles, a graduate of London University, who has spent ten years in medical work among women in Kashmir. The M.S.U.W. annual sale of work is held in turn in Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide, and is supported by the interest of graduates, students, pupils of the large secondary schools and colleges, by Y.W.C.A. workers, and friends of M.S.U.W.

Under the auspices of the Sydney University Women's Council, Dr. Constance d'Arcy, will give two lectures, one on August 7, and the other on August 14, at Stanway House, on "The Scientific and Social Aspects of Venereal Disease."

At Gordonville, Condor-street, Burwood, a "welcome home" evening was given to Private Frederick Hogan and Private T. Hemmingson, on their return from the front. Private Hogan was wounded in Gallipoli, and was also severely wounded in Pozieres. Private Hemmingson was wounded in Gallipoli, and lost his right leg. The heroes were met by their uncle and aunt, who were host and hostess. The house and grounds were decorated with flags and battalion colours, lent by Alderman Williams, of Burwood. Mr. Ulic O'Neill proposed the health of the heroes, which was duly responded to. Among the guests four generations of the Hogan family were represented. Sapper Price, Driver Barr, Corporal Armstrong, Private Abrahams (all returned) were also present.

Miss Mabel Short, of the Y.W.C.A., Sydney, is a patient in Lewisham Hospital, having successfully undergone a serious operation.

The Women's Commonwealth Patriotic Association is making preliminary arrangements for holding a "National Economy Exhibition" at the Sydney Town Hall in the last week of October. Miss Grace Burrows has been appointed manager.

The A.M.C. Comforts Fund finished Christmas packing in bond this week for the men in France, sending 118 cases. Next week the packing for Egypt and Mesopotamia begins. Anyone wishing to send a present to a man in the Light Horse or Camel Corps, Field Ambulances, A.M.C. Details, or hospitals, may do so by donating 5/ to the fund. Last mail many letters of gratitude were received from the A.M.C. Details attached to the various battalions. The O.C. of the 1st Field Ambulance also wrote acknowledging receipt of nine cases, and said how very much the gifts were appreciated by his men. The O.C. of the 9th Field Ambulance wrote thanking the depot for 10 cases of comforts.

At the Presbyterian School Hall, Crow's Nest, last week, a send-off was tendered to Mrs. J. Dunnet and family, of Rhodes-avenue, Naremburn, prior to their departure for Tenterfield. About 150 people were present, and a programme of vocal and instrumental music was given by Miss Edith Brainwood, Miss Vera Lee, Miss Mary Scott, and others. A presentation was made by Chaplain Rev. Hugh Paton to Miss Jessie Dunnet, as a recognition of her services as a church worker.

Mrs. A. L. Bonamy, of Newnham, Ashfield, gave an "at home" on July 14 to Private Oliver Hopkins, when a presentation of a banking account in a leather bank-book, tied with his battalion colours, was made him. The account, placed with the Government Savings Bank, had been collected and contributed by cousins of Private Hopkins as a token of sympathy with the sufferings he had endured from the loss of his right foot while on active service in France. Among those present were Mrs. A. Hopkins, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. C. S. Greenwell, Mrs. and Miss Fisher, Mrs. C. Hopkins, Mrs. Flatau, Mrs. C. G. Greenwell, Mrs. Newmarch, Mrs. Broughton, Mrs. H. de Vernet, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bucknell, Mr. and Mrs. A. Brown, Miss Brown, Mr. S. Bonamy, Miss Ellis, Mr. T. Robinson, Miss Sutton, Mrs. Sawkins, Misses Poppy and K. Sawkins, Mr. Marsden, Miss Walsh, and Miss Marsden.

Farmer's smoke-room presented an attractive appearance for the gift afternoon held by Mrs. Glanville in aid of the stalls for the forthcoming village fair next month, in aid of the 1st and 53rd Christmas Comforts Fund. The tables were decorated with pink and white sweet-peas. Mr. Budden gave an address, and the Misses Jenny Cree, Rosie Kidson, Alice and Mary Gardiner, Beryl Croft, and Mrs. King contributed to the programme. The gifts included several cheques. One hundred guests were entertained, including Mrs. Read and Mrs. Ellis (Parsley Bay), Mesdames Pursney, Bernard, Jones, Brown, Griffith, Milne, Young, J. W. Street, Charley (wife of Major Charley), Muir, Kidson, Gardiner, and Miss Milson.

On July 11 a wedding was solemnised at St. Phillip's, Church Hill, between Sylvia Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Glasson, of Tremearne, Lucknow, Orange, and Michael William Dryburgh, of Java. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white tulle, hand-embroidered with silver crystal and diamante; the decolletage was cut with square, and the skirt had wired panniers; the train was of white tulle over the palest shade of pink. She wore a diamond pendant, and carried a bouquet, the gifts of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids, Miss Rita Glasson, sister of the bride, and Miss Nola Hagon wore gowns of La France rose taffeta, the bodices composed of fine white shadow lace, needlerun with gold thread, and the skirts draped tightly at the foot, and with Watteau panniers at the sides. They wore picture hats of black tulle, edged with rose beads and tiny wreaths of flowers, and each carried a bouquet of sweet pea and wore a diamond ring, the gifts of the bridegroom. The wedding breakfast was served at Petty's.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at All Saints' Church, Woollahra, on July 21, between Martyn Monson, son of George Threlfall, formerly of Preston, England, and of Mrs. Threlfall, Hillview, Turramurra, and Alice Noel Graves, only daughter of the late Randolph Sidney Simpson, and of Mrs. E. E. Lucy, Naroomba, Nelson-street, Woollahra. The rector, the Rev. W. L. Langley, officiated, and the bride, who wore a cream coat and skirt and black hat and furs, was given away by her step-father. The only bridesmaid was Miss Joan Lucy, and Mr. A. H. Stuart acted as best man. A small reception was held afterwards at the bride's home, and among those present were Mrs. G. Threlfall, Mr. Edmund S. Paul, Mrs. Warden Graves, and the Misses Graves, Mesdames H. de P. Beresford, John Gorton, J. F. King, Misses Sydney Williams, Kathleen King, Mary Haswell, Hilary Martin, Mary Grant, Kathleen Read, Dorothy Curtis, and Messrs. E. C. Barbour, G. Marr Thompson, Selwyn Smith, and W. Seymour. Mr. and Mrs. Threlfall left for Melbourne the following day.

On July 21 Mrs. D. R. Comans gave a farewell tea at the Albion Hotel, Cootamundra, to Mrs. E. J. Burrell, and on the following Thursday, a tea was given by Mrs. G. T. Attwood at her residence, Tempe, at which Mrs. E. J. Burrell was the guest of honor. A presentation of a pair of silver vases was made. A musical programme was rendered by Mesdames Field, M'Donald, Murray Scott, M'Lean, Misses M'Mahon, Florance, K. Florance, Doidge, and Doctor Henry.

At All Saints', Singleton, on June 13, the marriage of Sallie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, Cromer, Singleton, and the Rev. W. H. G. Cochrane, of Christchurch Cathedral, Newcastle, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Cochrane, Dubbo, was celebrated by the rector, Rev. C. M. Meil, assisted by the Rev. R. E. Woodhouse; the service was fully choral. The bride wore white crystaline-de-soie, with hat to match, and was given away by her father. The bridegroom's presents were her bouquet, a circle of pearls and a set of fox furs. Miss Hilda Brown (sister) was bridesmaid, and wore a frock of pink crepe-de-Chine, with touches of black, and a hat to match; her bouquet and a signet ring were presents from the bridegroom. The Rev. W. Tatham, of Aberdeen, was best man. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. G. Brown entertained the relations of both families at Cromer. Several presentations to the bridegroom were made by different centres of the Singleton parish, where he was formerly curate. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. G. Cochrane left later in the day for Kiama, where the honeymoon was spent, the bride wearing a coat and skirt of grey gabardine and a hat to tone. Prior to the wedding the girl friends of Miss Brown gave her a kitchen tea, at which many useful gifts were received.

A letter has been received by the Queensland Machinery Company, Limited, Albert-street, Brisbane, containing photographs and colours evidently intended for the relatives of Private Grimbly, whom they believe reside in Sydney, and who are asked to communicate with the firm.

THE CHURCHES.

FOURTH YEAR OF THE WAR.

Archbishop Wright, Primate of Australia, comments in a pastoral letter upon the anniversary of Great Britain's entry into the war as follows:—"We are now close upon the threshold of a fourth year of war. When the war burst upon us prophesies of a three years' war seemed hard to credit. Now we discover that even they far under-estimated the demand that would be laid upon us. None dare presume any more to predict at what date the end will be. It is not a year, but years of war, for which apparently we would do wisely to prepare. One thing is certain, that this anticipation, full of the gravest possibilities of suffering and privation as it is, makes the loudest call upon the religious instinct of our race. It is for us to justify our claim to the psalmist's commendation which comes to us from the Psalms for to-day: 'He will not be afraid of any evil tidings; his heart standeth fast, and believeth in the Lord.' Here is just that something over and above physical courage which is needed to win victory. The steadfast heart was never more wanted than at this juncture. The long strain might easily unbalance those who have endured much and bravely, so that they should lend an ear to the diabolical whisper, 'is it worth while?' It is upon this that Germany counts. But if she can endure, much more can we, if only we are true to the faith of our forefathers. I still, however, think that until we show greater signs of penitent soul we shall not win. I hope that the clergy will take steps on the first Sunday in August to mark the beginning of this new stage of the war. Unless we speak ever trite truths men may easily close their eyes to facts of the utmost seriousness to themselves and others. It is the true thought of God that we must endeavour to bring home."

Referring to the Provincial Synod, which will be opened on Wednesday, August 15, in the Chapter House, the opening service being at 11, in the Cathedral, when the sermon will be preached by the Bishop of Ballarat, the Archbishop says:—"I hope that as many clergy as possible will be present in robes at this service. The Provincial Synod plays an important part in co-ordinating the thought of the Church, and in dealing with matters of common concern in the province which is coterminous with the State. Even though each diocese is the final legislative entity, the Provincial Synod can and does assist towards common legislation on matters of great principles, without in any way forcing the thought of other dioceses on any one without its consent. I ask the prayers of the Church for guidance in our deliberations."

The new church offices will, we hope, be completed before the end of August, says his Grace in conclusion. The generations who come after will be indebted to those churchmen of to-day who were statesmanlike enough to use the Church's funds for these great works of diocesan necessity, freeing the work of the Church from the hampering conditions that had so long shackled it, without at the same time neglecting the proper stewardship of the moneys of the Church."

Several important works are in preparation in connection with the music at St. Andrew's Cathedral, including some of the more modern compositions heard at St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey. A special rehearsal was held recently, when Tchaikowsky's "Hymn to the Cherubim" and Gounod's "By Babylon's Wave" were put in hand. The latter composition is interesting, from the fact that it was written when the eminent French composer was at the height of his popularity, and when it was first produced in London it made a great impression. "By Babylon's Wave" was sung at St. Paul's, Melbourne, shortly after the present cathedral was opened, and is a favourite with the regular congregations in that cathedral.

Dr. Mervyn Archdall, principal tenor soloist at St. Andrew's Cathedral, who volunteered for active service in January last, is at present on the staff of the Second Australian General Hospital, in France. He has had a varied experience, and on the voyage to London he was shipwrecked in the Mediterranean. Before leaving for France Dr. Archdall attended several of the services at St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey, and was much impressed by the beauty of the music.

An index to the proceedings of the sessions of the Anglican Provincial Synod of New South Wales, from 1869 to 1912, has just been compiled by Mr. E. C. Crane, of the Sydney Diocesan Registry. It enables ready reference to be made to the various motions, questions, and ordinances which have been before the Synod. A list of the various matters referred to in the Presidential addresses of Bishops Barker and Barry and Archbishops Saumarez Smith and Wright is a valuable guide to the questions of the day dealt with by the heads of the Anglican Church in N.S.W.

To-morrow afternoon will be observed as Recruiting Sunday in connection with St. Clement's Sunday School, Mosman. Each scholar has been urged to take one boy or girl who does not attend any Sunday School to the class, and by this means it is hoped to greatly increase the number of scholars.

The patronal festival of St. James' Church was held on Wednesday night, the anthems "The Wilderness" (Wesley), with the solo by Mr. F. Nash, and "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling Place" (Brahms), being rendered. A programme of sacred music was contributed to by Miss Dora Rancland, and Messrs. B. Dudley and Faunce Allman.

Archbishop Kelly will preach in St. Mary's Cathedral to-morrow morning, at 11 o'clock, in connection with the celebration of the third anniversary of the war.

The Very Rev. J. Whyte, Chancellor of the R.C. Diocese of Sydney, was presented with a gold chalice at St. Michael's, Stanmore, at a ceremony in celebration of the 25th anniversary of his ordination.

The new Roman Catholic School Church at Rose Bay will be opened by Archbishop Kelly to-morrow afternoon.

On Sunday last five Australian novices who have joined the Passionate Fathers were "professed" in the monastery of the Order near Goulburn.

The new Papal Delegate for Australasia, Monsignor Cattaneo, has been consecrated Titular Archbishop of Palmyra. The date of the departure of Archbishop Cerretti's successor from Rome has not been announced.

A letter has been received at the head office of the Methodist Foreign Missions from the Rev. J. Watson, chairman of the Methodist Aborigines Mission in the Northern Territory, stating that there has been a serious outbreak of fever at South Goulburn Island. There have been six deaths, one being that of a native attached to the mission. Dr. Leighton Jones, Government Medical Officer, had been for some time on the island, and was successfully coping with the outbreak. According to Mr. Watson, Dr. Jones pronounced this fever to be real malaria, which is interesting in view of the difference of opinion that has existed for some time as to whether or not malaria was prevalent in the Northern Territory. At the time of writing Mr. Watson was about to leave for a visit to Thursday Island, calling en route at various parts of the Northern Territory.

Entries for the annual examination of the Methodist Sunday school, to be held on August 29, have closed, and it is probable that the number of candidates will exceed the record established last year.

The Rev. Harold H. Wheen, general secretary of the Methodist Sunday School Department, has returned from a visitation of the circuits in the Hunter district. He states that a movement is in progress at Singleton for the erection of a Kindergarten Hall at a cost of £1000.

The Rev. Charles A. Gimblett, who for three years has been in charge of the Methodist Educational Mission at Fatshan, China, is visiting Sydney for a few weeks.

A new Methodist church has been erected at Rothbury, in the Branxton circuit. The dedication service was held last week in the presence of a large congregation. The Rev. G. O. Cocks, chairman of the Maitland district, assisted by the Rev. Leslie Wilson, conducted the service.

The Rev. Arthur C. Nelson, who has just completed a fruitful ministry at the Congregational church, West Maitland, and who recently accepted a call to the pastorate of the Woollahra Congregational Church, commences his duties in his new sphere to-morrow. He will be inducted to his new charge by Rev. W. L. Patison, chairman of the Congregational Union of New South Wales, at the morning service, and will be welcomed at a social gathering on Wednesday evening.

The Rev. R. A. Thompson, B.A., begins his ministry as co-pastor with the Rev. W. Mathison, B.A., to-morrow, at Croydon, in the morning, and at Epping in the evening. Welcome meetings are being held at Epping on Tuesday, and at Croydon on Thursday evening of next week.

The Rev. [illegible] J. Harper was recently presented with £147, as a mark of sympathy in his bereavement and regard for the self-sacrificing work he has done in connection with the Congregation Mission at Copeland and on the upper tributaries of the Manning River. For twelve months Mr. Harper will have the oversight of Mascot and Alexandria churches, his work in the Copeland district meanwhile being attended to by Pastor W. Frith.

The united service of intercession, held in Pitt-street Congregational Church on Tuesday last, completed the three years of uninterrupted weekly meetings. There was a large attendance when the Rev. Dr. Carruthers, president of the General Methodist Conference, took the chair. Prayers were offered by the chairman and the Revs. Canon Bellingham and N. J. Cocks. The address by Rev. John Ferguson, of St. Stephen's Church, on the things which the three years' war had revealed, was very much appreciated. The services will go on at the same hour every Tuesday.

Mrs. J. Hunter MacGoun has received a cable from her husband, the Rev. J. Hunter MacGoun (Presbyterian), of Lindfield, stating that he is now on his way home.

The Lake Macquarie charge, in the presbytery of the Hunter, has become vacant, through the resignation of the Rev. K. F. Partridge, who has accepted an appointment in connection with the Australian Inland Mission. The Rev. W. J. Gray, of Waratah, has been appointed interim moderator.

In connection with the return of Private William Jackson, V.C., and the public welcome given to him at Hay, a telegram of congratulation was sent by the Moderator, through the Rev. William Robertson, the minister of Hay, to be conveyed to Private Jackson, who is attached to the Presbyterian congregation in the district.

The Rev. Thomas Morgan, Presbyterian home mission superintendent, will shortly visit the Kempsey charge, on his way in from the Dorrigo district, and will later proceed to Bourke, where he will spend some weeks.

The Moderator of the Presbyterian State General Assembly, the Rev. John Paterson, has completed arrangements for visiting a number of charges in the southern district, and will leave Sydney on Tuesday, August 28.

Mr. H. A. Wheeler, formerly general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Adelaide, and during the last few months national secretary, has been appointed chief executive officer in London for the Y.M.C.A. work amongst Australian soldiers in England and France. The Y.M.C.A. national army and navy department has also appointed two honorary commissioners, with headquarters in London, in the interests of the war work of the association amongst Australian troops.

Mr. Chas. Thompson, who was appointed to the charge of the Sydney City Mission district at Paddington last year, has been compelled to resign through ill-health.

Chaplain A. E. Forbes, D.C.M., was farewelled by the Churches of Christ at Enmore Tabernacle on Thursday evening, and presentations were made to him. Chaplain Forbes has enlisted in the A.I.F. as a combatant, after serving some time as chaplain with the home forces.

An honour roll will be unveiled on Sunday afternoon at the City Temple, Campbell-street, by the Attorney-General, Mr. D. R. Hall. The roll contains 26 names, including one staff nurse, of members of the church.

Members of the Missionary Society for University Women (Sydney University Branch) will hold a sale of work in aid of the Missionary Settlement Hostel, Bombay, and the work of the Y.W.C.A. among Indian women students, at the Y.W.C.A. Hall, 163 Castlereagh-street, on Saturday, August 11. The opening ceremony will be performed by Lady Fairfax at 3 p.m. Gifts may be left at the Y.W.C.A., Liverpool-street, addressed to the secretaries.

THE NAVAL COLLEGE

CAPTAIN MORGAN'S RETIREMENT.

After two years spent in command of the Royal Australian Naval College, at Jervis Bay, Captain C. H. Morgan, R.N., is returning to England.

"They have been two years of absorbing interest to me and to my wife," said Captain Morgan to a representative of the "Herald," "and I am returning to England solely on account of my health, and on medical advice. It is a great disappointment to me to have to give up this interesting work, and I was sorry to have to decline the offer of a renewal of my term of office. When I arrived here in April, 1915, renewing my acquaintance with Australia—for it was not my first visit to this delightful country—the Royal Australian Naval College was only just beginning its usefulness. It was in the making. It is, indeed, still in the making. Many things have been done in the last two years, and the college at Jervis Bay has grown into quite respectable proportions in the matter of buildings and equipment; but much still remains to be done.

"Australia ought to be proud of its navy, and it ought also to be proud of its naval college, from which will come in future years the officers of its fleet. Some of the boys of the college—22 of them—are now serving with the Grand Fleet in the North Sea, and they will be wonderfully benefited by this experience. I have had letters speaking of them in the highest terms. One of my correspondents, in fact, stated that these Australian lads had been turned out 'a more finished article' than the naval cadets from Dartmouth and Osborne. This is high praise, considering the great advantages that the English lads have. Moreover, the English cadets had been pressed into the service on the outbreak of the war. Knowledge is born of experience. With equal facilities for training, with equal experience, the Australian naval cadets will have no need to fear comparison with the boys from home. Even as it is, they are doing marvellously well, and I think it is a fine thing that along with the Duntroon Military College, the Federal Government of Australia should have established this naval college.

"Whether or not Jervis Bay is the best place for it is a debatable question, but I need not go into that. The college is there, and whilst the buildings are not, strictly speaking, of a permanent character, a great deal of money has been spent there. The climate is a splendid one, but the site is not an ideal one in some other respects. The college is lacking in communications, for one thing. There is an absence of those amenities of life which mean so much to the officers and their wives. The place is isolated, and it is difficult for men to keep abreast of the times, and know all that is going on without an opportunity of meeting and exchanging views with other men. Then the bay itself, whilst very beautiful, is not all that it ought to be, having regard to the needs of a naval establishment. The frequent north-easterlies render the water too rough for the proper training of the boys in practical work aboard ship in the summer time, and there are other winds in winter which make the conditions anything but ideal. But then, of course, one cannot have everything just as one would like it. We must put up with these things, I suppose. We have, however, recently obtained a 56-foot picket-boat for service at the college, and this is a great advantage.

"There is one thing that strikes me as very necessary, especially in war time," Captain Morgan went on to say, "and that is the installation of a wireless plant at the college. There are times when the telephone service breaks down, and even when the telegraph and telephone services break down together, and urgent messages might be waiting. No naval establishment in these days can afford to be without its wireless, and I would respectfully urge this view upon the authorities.

"I cannot go away without expressing my appreciation of the cordial co-operation I have had from Commander Grant, Lieutenant Seton, and all officers. Indeed, the spirit obtaining throughout the whole college has been splendid. I may mention that before leaving my wife and I were entertained and presented with an address from the chief petty officers, petty officers and men of the establishment and the ship's company, and it was really very pleasing to us to know that we leave with the respect and esteem of all.

"I cannot here touch on the matters I have discussed in my last report, which has been sent on to the Minister for the Navy, and should be placed before Parliament shortly; but this I can say, it has been a very interesting period in my life. If I have been able to do anything, no matter how little, to assist in the development of the Royal Australian Navy—a navy which must as time goes on become a very important factor in the Pacific and in defence of Empire interests generally—I am proud to have been in the position to do it, and my only regret is that I cannot stay to continue the work. It may be that ere long the college, which now has about 120 cadets in training, will have a larger number to look after. The building of more ships will mean the training of larger numbers of officers. And in regard to the ships that have already been built in Australia, I think the Commonwealth Government and all concerned are to be congratulated on the work that has been turned out—turned out, I might say, under many difficulties. There have been complaints, it is true, as to the time occupied in the construction of the ships, but it has to be remembered that any new project of such an important character as this must expect to meet with difficulties at the outset. With the improvements that have been made, and others that are being made, or are to be made, with the acquisition of new plant, and with the valuable experience the men engaged on this work have had, many of the difficulties of the past will be avoided in the future.

"I can only say, in conclusion, that I shall continue to watch the development of the Royal Australian Navy with the very greatest interest."

It is understood that Commander Grant will have charge of the college, with the rank of captain, until a permanent appointment is made, and that Lieutenant Seton, with the rank of commander, will be next in command.

THE ADVENTURES OF MARMADUKE CLEGG

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

Mistress Marian was hardly in the room, and the door closed behind her, before the sound of movement came from the river frontage outside Whitehall. There was the shouting of link-boys, and some sharp words of command at intervals of two or three minutes. I wondered what it meant, and looked at Mistress Carey for an explanation.

"The Council is over," she said in quiet tones, "James leaves to-night for Windsor."

I noticed that she did not say "the King;" already there were not a few who had deposed the bigoted tyrant in their hearts.

"My Lord Lumley informed me that his Majesty was about to join his army in the West."

"That design is changed. He goes to Windsor for the present, then to the camp at Salisbury. The Duke of Grafton, my Lord Preston, and others go with him in the State barge."

"And my Lord Churchill?" I inquired, moved by some sudden inspiration. I had fought by his side under Turenne, and had marked that masterly courage and coolness, that extraordinary capacity for seizing the trend of events, and for making use of them, which marked John Churchill, perhaps more than any man who ever lived. Something told me that now on his decision rested the fateful result. If he adhered to James, England would be assured with the triple crown for the head which had proved itself unequal to wearing it. If he went over to William, the great game of chess, with three kingdoms as the stakes, was won and lost almost before the pieces were set on the board.

"My lord," Marian answered, after just one moment of hesitation, as if she doubted how much to say, and what to leave unsaid, "goes not to Windsor. He has other things to do, and has excused himself to James."

I took her hands in mine—"And you?" I asked, "what brings you here, and how long do you remain?"

She looked me in the eyes, and did not seek to withdraw her hands.

"My mother and I received timely warning from friends very high up that we should certainly be closely questioned with reference to my brother and your part in the matter. Jeffreys sticks at nothing. Incarceration in the Tower was more than probable, with other things too horrible to contemplate"—she gave a little shudder. "My mother's health is already shaken, and would have been broken altogether—and I—" she stopped, then went on, "the ignominy would, I think, have killed me, too."

I swore in deep gutturals within my throat that Jeffreys should both pay for what he had done and for what he had hoped to do.

"My mother took refuge in the Midlands with our distant kinsman the Earl of Norfolk—and I—came here. Even Jeffreys dare not touch me—if indeed he suspects my hiding place, which I doubt—for I am under the protection of the Princess Anne and of my Lord Churchill."

"You are sure you are safe from molestation?" I asked eagerly.

"Quite sure. In addition my Lord Jeffreys is himself beginning to be afraid. He realises that this business of the Prince of Orange is a very different matter from the bungled affair of the Duke of Monmouth. Jeffreys is shrewd enough when not in his cups—and well informed likewise. He also knows that for him there is no forgiveness or redemption. Even my Lord Sutherland will be forgiven, rewarded even, but Jeffreys never. Of that I am assured by one who makes no mistakes."

My jealousy burnt like fire. "Is there such an one?" I blurted out. "Do you so trust and believe in him because you—" I did not dare finish the sentence.

She released her hands almost by force and stepped back. Her face flamed.

"Sir, you adventure too much and trespass on my endurance!"

Then she saw at once my contrition and pain—and perhaps, too, she was lenient because she had the clue of the cause of my outburst. "He is far above me—is not, could not be aught to me. He is indeed the husband of the lady whom you have twice seen in this room." She stopped. "I ought not to have said it; I was bidden to be discreet and silent." She ran to the door leading into the passage and looked beyond, coming back satisfied that there was no one there.

"I have forgotten what you told me," I said; "in fact, I may not have quite heard it."

She smiled, a beautiful radiance endowing her eyes and lips and whole face with its glory. It was like a dawn when the sun breaks through a mist, and clothes sky and earth with a brilliance all the greater by way of contrast with what has gone before.

It had been my lot to see Mistress Marian in fear and stress; now she could be buoyant, gay, and blithesome. I knew that I should love her in all her moods.

"I think you have a very good memory, sir—but I also know you have a great deal of discretion—and that must serve instead of loss of memory!" She laid her fingers on my arm. "Come!" she said. "James and his following have gone. It is safe for you to issue forth. Remember if any one accosts you the word is 'Salisbury.'"

She led me to the door, carrying the same lamp she had brought before, having picked it up off the table.

As we descended the stairs I paused at the first landing.

"Where is my lord Lumley, I would speak with him before leaving?"

"He is gone some time, likewise Colonel Berkeley. They both had urgent work on hand which admitted of no delay."

"Is it safe for me to return to my lodging?" We had reached the front door.

"I am not sure—in any case you will have no time; for there is other and pressing work awaiting you."

"You talk in mysteries."

"Because my tongue is tied." She opened the door.

"Turn towards the river; when you reach the path follow it twenty paces to the right, then wait." She stopped, then went on: "God speed and keep you safe."

Immediately afterwards I felt a pressure on my hand. Then the door closed behind me.

CHAPTER XXVI.

IN THE THAMES BOAT-HOUSE.

I turned away from the Palace in the direction of the Thames, keeping as much as possible to the darkness cast by the building. Nevertheless, the precaution, so natural to an old campaigner, seemed unnecessary. No one was moving. The silence of the grave was upon everything. The dragoons had disappeared, and with them my Lord Lumley and Colonel Berkeley. After the departure of the King and his followers no one moved outside the Palace, or, as far as I could tell, within it. No lights shone in the windows. Yet somehow I felt eyes were upon me, unseen but seeing.

Hearts were beating. Great issues, already decided, were being prepared. I had a misgiving for Mistress Marian Carey. She was but a frail thing to be launched in this conspiracy; the lightest of jetsam flung into the maelstrom of strife and war. I was doing her will now, going forth; had I followed my own will I should have stayed near where my arm could have defended her in an emergency. I was on William's side; but William was a featherweight in the balance compared to the girl who had just locked the door upon me.

It was fine, but a damp mist exhaled from the river, and enveloped me as I approached it. I could hear the splash of the waters against the bank. The sound was a warning not to advance further, as the result would be a plunge into the cold stream, for which I had no desire.

I counted the twenty paces Mistress Marian had named, then stopped. I drew my cloak about me. The mist crept into my bones. Minutes elapsed. I am an impatient man, not good at waiting, but her instructions were imperative. I had no thought but to obey.

I heard a step behind me, and turned quickly. I could just discern a tall, cloaked figure, a broad beaver pressed low upon the forehead. The face was masked, but the light was insufficient to furnish me with the fact.

In a low, deep tone, the tone of a man used to command, the newcomer demanded the password.

I had heard that tone before; it was unmistakable.

"'Salisbury,' my lord."

"You are liberal with your 'my lords,'" he sneered.

I remembered when I had thought the same of others, with regard to myself.

"Not unless there is sufficient reason," I explained.

He touched me on the arm, drawing me forwards. We came to a boathouse, standing shadowy, hard by the river. He unlocked the door, and, after we had both entered, fastened it behind him.

Then he produced a lanthorn from under his cloak, and set it on a rough deal table. There was one chair and a bench against the wall.

He sat down on the latter, and begged me to do the same.

"You know me?" he queried, in a tone which betrayed some irritation.

"I was at Entzheim and at Sabybach," I replied.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

REFUSING A CLEARANCE.

QUESTION OF EXPORT OF WHEAT.

Blom v Commonwealth.

Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Halse Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Dalrymple and Blain, appeared for the plaintiff, Axel E. Blom, a Russian subject, and Mr. Knox, K.C., and Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, for the defendant. The matter was brought before the Court by way of special case, which has already been published.

The Court reserved judgment.

IN CHAMBERS.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson.)

A PROHIBITION.

Re P. E. Pearson (M. S. Love, S.M., and another, respondents).

Mr. H. G. Edwards, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, appeared for Percy Edward Pearson, hairdresser, of Woolloomooloo, and moved to make absolute a rule nisi for a prohibition to restrain Mr. Milton S. Love, S.M., and Police-constable Patrick Sheehy from further proceeding upon two orders made against appellant. Mr. Boyce, instructed by the Crown Solicitor (Mr. J. V. Tillett), appeared for respondents to oppose the application. It appeared that Pearson was charged at the Water Police Court on June 22, under section 27 (3) of the Police Offences Act, that on May 14 he knowingly had in the custody of William Henry Regan, of Belmore-road, Coogee, five dozen razors and a quantity of watches, which might reasonably be suspected of having been stolen. He was convicted, and fined £10 in each case. He now appealed, mainly on the ground that the goods were not in his actual or constructive possession within the meaning of the section, and that he had sold them to Regan a month before he was charged, and had, therefore, entirely parted with their possession.

His Honor, after hearing argument, made the rule nisi absolute for a prohibition on the ground that the section did not apply to the offences charged, but no costs were allowed.

IN EQUITY.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

INTERPRETATION OF WILL.

Steinmann v Healy.

Mr. Norman Pilcher and Mr. H. G. Edwards, instructed by Mr. William Arnott, appeared for the plaintiff, Melvie Steinmann; and Mr. S. A. Thompson, instructed by Messrs. Sullivan Brothers, for the defendants, Claude Healy and Lynne Healy. The matter at issue concerned the will of the late William Roderick Neil Harvey, deceased, late of M'Mahon's Point, North Sydney, agent. The testator, who died on May 29, 1914, in his will directed the prompt payment of £50 to the plaintiff. He also bequeathed to her a further sum of £300 (when sufficient settlement of his estate was made). He further directed that the plaintiff could select from his personal effects and jewellery any articles she wished, except his gold watch (left to his brother, Lynne Harvey). £100 was devised to Claude Healey, a defendant, and executor of the will. The residue of the estate was left to Lynne Harvey (testator's brother), who is now with the Australian forces.

The plaintiff, in her affidavit, stated that she had been paid the said legacy of £50, but she had only received (on October 7, 1915) £150 out of the £300 legacy. The excuse for non-payment of the balance was that there was not sufficient money in the estate to pay it until the Launceston property had been sold. The plaintiff alleged that she had no opportunity of making a selection from the personal estate as provided in the will. The gross value of the estate (excluding the Tasmanian property) was about £1650.

The defendant Claude Healy (executor) disputed plaintiff's claim as to her selection of the personal effects. The affidavit of D. S. Sullivan, testator's solicitor, stated that the plaintiff and testator had been closely associated for some time prior to the latter's death. Plaintiff had delivered to the deponent a gold watch, but they had retained testator's yacht club badge, tie pin, and a clock, and said that she did not wish for anything more.

After argument, his Honor directed the defendant executor to pay the plaintiff £100, with 4 per cent. interest, from 12 months after testator's death. It was referred to the Master in Equity to inquire whether the plaintiff had made a selection in accordance with the will. In the event of the Master deciding that no selection had been made, the Master was to determine as to what the personal estate consisted of. In the event of his finding that the selection had been made there was to be a reference as to whether a camera (valued at a large sum) was plaintiff's property at testator's death.

ORIGINATING SUMMONS.

Mr. W. J. G. Mann, instructed by Mr. J. A. I. Perry, appeared for the Auburn Municipal Council, and applied for a decree, or admissions, for the recovery of £201 13s 8d, outstanding rates, said to be owing up to September 8, 1916. His Honor made a decree directing the sale of certain lands, the balance, after satisfying the council's claim, to be paid into Court to the credit of the suit.

INJUNCTION MOTION.

Mr. J. A. Ferguson, instructed by Messrs. Laurence and Laurence, applied on behalf of the Brooklana Timber Company to restrain W. Wells from felling certain timber on his farm in the county of Fitzroy. Counsel stated that a settlement of the matter at issue was pending. His Honor adjourned the hearing for a week.

H. C. PERRY'S WILL.

Mr. R. K. Manning, instructed by Mr. E. H. Gardner (agent for Mr. L. A. Lane, of Orange), appeared for the plaintiffs, Stephen Perry and Betsy Perry, the parents of Herbert Carl Perry, of Sydney, carpenter, who died on April 18 last. Mr. F. R. Jordan, instructed by Messrs. Thomas Rose and Dawes, appeared for the defendant, Agnes Beatrice Perry (widow of the deceased). The testator, in his will, bequeathed to his parents his estate, and directed that they were to provide for his wife.

The plaintiffs applied to the Court to determine whether the defendant was beneficially interested in the estate, subject to the maintenance of the defendant and other matters.

His Honor reserved his decision.

IN DIVORCE.

(Before Mr. Justice Street.)

HORTON v HORTON.

In this suit, counsel concluded their addresses. His Honor reserved his decision.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before the Registrar.)

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

Mr. M. J. Connington, for the Federated Enginedrivers and Firemen's Association, sought leave to appeal against the award of the Government Railways, Group No. 4 Board. Consent was granted.

His Honor granted consent, on the application of Mr. Bretnall, on behalf of the Railway Commissioners, to appeal against the award of the Government Railways, Group No. 1 (Permanent Way, Wages Staff) Board.

Consent was refused to the Carpenters and Joiners' Union to appeal against the same award. His Honor declined to hear the Railway and Tramway Service Association in the matter, as the members of this union were taking part in a strike.

The wheat carriers application for an award relating to stacking and rebagging at Enfield and Goulburn is still part heard.

(Before Judge Rolin.)

The Stove, Piano Frame Moulders and Stovemakers' Employees' Union applied for an award under the Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group, No. 16 Board. Mr. Henwood appeared for the union, and Mr. Smedley for the respondents. The case stands part heard.

COMMONWEALTH ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. H. D. Wood, Deputy Registrar.)

AUSTRALIAN NAVY DRAUGHTSMEN.

This was an application for the registration of an association called "The Association of Draughtsmen, Department of the Royal Australian Navy," as an organisation of employees under the Commonwealth Conciliation and Arbitration Act. The applicants stated that the said association consisted of at least three-fifths of employees in connection with the shipbuilding and naval construction industry. Mr. T. R. Bavin, instructed by Messrs. Ash and Maclean, appeared for the applicants. Mr. A. R. Croft appeared, to object, on behalf of the Federated Shipwrights, Ship Constructors, and Boat Builders' Association of Australia.

The objections mainly were that the applicant association could conveniently belong to the objecting association, and that, except in name only, the applicant association was not an association, either in an industrial or other sense.

The application is part heard.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEAL.

(Before Mr. Justice Street, Mr. Justice Sly, and Mr. Justice Gordon.)

THE KATOOMBA TRAGEDY.

LEAVE TO APPEAL REFUSED.

Mr. Breckenridge, instructed by Mr. H. E. Macintosh, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. C. A. White, instructed by the Crown Solicitor (Mr. J. V. Tillett), for the Crown. This was an application by prisoner, Herbert Keith Shaw, for leave to appeal against his conviction and sentence. On July 9 the Court, on an appeal by prisoner, dismissed all the grounds submitted in his favour, but granted an adjournment of the subsequent motion for leave to appeal in order that prisoner might have an opportunity of furnishing further evidence by affidavit on the question of the family history in regard to insanity, and more particularly as to the mental condition of prisoner's maternal uncle, who 17 years ago died in a hospital for insane in Tasmania.

Mr. Breckenridge now informed the Court that since the matter was last before it there had been a fresh development, and he asked leave to read affidavits on the point, which was, in fact, interlaced with the other ground upon which prisoner asked leave to appeal. The necessary permission having been given, counsel read an affidavit by the prisoner, in which he stated that on the night of King's death the latter invited him to his room and gave him a drink of whisky. Prisoner also said that King attempted to commit an indecent and criminal assault upon him, when, in his defence, he struck him with a hammer and caused his death. He had always refused, when questioned, to tell any of the above facts, although he did tell his solicitor and the various doctors that King had invited him to his room on the Sunday night; but he mentioned to his brother Lionel that neither he nor Mr. M'Intosh knew what had really occurred between him and King that night. In an affidavit by prisoner's brother, Lionel Shaw, deponent said that when he asked him what had occurred on the night when he went into King's room his brother replied, "I cannot tell you." Deponent then asked, "Did you tell Mr. M'Intosh?" and prisoner replied, "I did not tell him, either." Counsel submitted that if the above evidence had been brought before the jury at the trial prisoner would either have been acquitted on the ground of justifiable homicide or a verdict of manslaughter returned. Mr. Breckenridge then read affidavits as to the mental condition of prisoner's uncle, who died in Tasmania, together with medical certificates as to his mental condition when he died, and contended that such evidence, if it had been placed before the jury, might have affected the opinion of the jury as proving the defence of insanity.

Mr. Justice Street (Mr. Justice Sly and Mr. Justice Gordon concurring) said that when the matter was last before it the Court dismissed the appeal, but adjourned the application for leave to appeal until after vacation, on the ground that fresh evidence was obtainable on the issue of insanity. The adjournment was granted to enable prisoner to show exactly what further evidence he was able to give, and its materiality on the question of insanity of the prisoner; and also as to what effect the evidence might have had if it had been placed before the jury at the trial.

Now, the evidence brought before the Court was simply a medical certificate of the death of prisoner's uncle in Tasmania 17 years ago, in an asylum, and there was nothing to show how that insanity had been brought about. He could not see that, if the evidence now before the Court had been placed before the jury at the trial it would have affected the opinion of medical experts on the question of the responsibility of prisoner for his acts. In his opinion the fresh evidence was insufficient, as far as that ground was concerned, to justify the Court in granting leave to appeal.

Then appellant brought forward a new ground. He had filed an affidavit dated yesterday, in which he made a statement which, if true, went to show that King met his death at the hands of appellant while in the commission of a criminal assault. Appellant admitted that he did not, at or before the trial inform his legal adviser or anyone else of this alleged offence, and gave no reason whatever to satisfy the Court as to the cause of his silence in the matter. At the trial the defence of insanity was set up, and he was of opinion that appellant's present statement was entirely inconsistent with that defence, and was one which the Court could not entertain. The application for leave to appeal was, therefore, refused.

REX v HEARN.

Mr. W. T. Coonan appeared for the prisoner in support of an application for leave to appeal. Mr. C. A. White appeared for the Crown. Prisoner George Clifford Hearn was convicted at the Quarter Sessions, before Judge Backhouse and a jury of 12, of larceny, and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment. He now asked for leave to appeal on various grounds. The Court refused the application. Leave to appeal was also refused in the cases of John Olsson, Thomas Harcourt Dempsey and Arnold Gordon Maddox.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Docker.)

May Arnold was found guilty of being found in a dwelling with intent to steal, and was remanded for sentence.

Arthur Dunkley pleaded not guilty to a charge of shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm. Mr. W. M'Mahon appeared for the accused. The verdict was not guilty, and the accused was discharged.

SENTENCES.

John Blumer, larceny, 12 months' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol.

Margaret Isabella Charles, false pretences, six months' light labour in the State Reformatory.

Cyrus Ward, stealing in a dwelling, six months' hard labour in Goulburn Gaol.

Maurice Smith, stealing in a dwelling (five charges), three years' penal servitude, and declared an habitual criminal.

Joseph James and Harold Bradley, uttering counterfeit coin, two years' hard labour in Bathurst Gaol.

John Burcham, horse stealing, seven years; larceny, five years; the sentences to be concurrent. The gaol records showed four previous convictions.

NATIONAL EFFICIENCY.

NEW ZEALAND BOARD'S REPORT.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Thursday.

The National Efficiency Board has presented its report to Parliament. In this is stated that in view of the necessity of the utilisation of working power to the best possible advantage, it recommends the enactment of legislation, vesting in the Government powers for the direction and control of all persons. The board is of opinion that the time has arrived when it is necessary to provide for the possibility of national industrial service in some form or other, and believes that a national register of persons employed in trades, industries, and occupations should be made, but not with a view to compulsory industrial service except in bona fide Government works for war purposes. The board believes that whilst the great bulk of the population is intensely loyal to the Crown, yet should any attempt be made to conscript or in any way force labour from one occupation to another, under private employment or for ordinary trade profit, the most serious industrial difficulties would occur. The first thing necessary is to make it possible in trades and industries for substituted or diluted labour to be employed. The board records the opinion that horse racing is non-essential, that no man should be exempted from military services owing to his connection with or employment in racing or breeding or handling of horses, for racing purposes; that during the continuation of the war and for six months thereafter, racing should be held upon the following public holidays only: Boxing Day, New Year's Day, Anniversary Day, Easter Monday, King's Birthday, Labour Day, and after 2 p.m. on the statutory weekly half-holidays. Especially referring to the liquor trade, the Board is convinced that it would be beneficial to the nation and conductive to the well-being of the people if the importation, manufacture, and sale of wine, beer, and spirituous liquors is prohibited, yet recognised that the question of national prohibition is one which should be submitted to the voice of the people. It, therefore, recommended that legislation be enacted providing for the issue to be submitted to a vote of the people at the earliest possible moment, such a vote to be upon the basis of immediate prohibition, accompanied by reasonable compensation to the interests affected. In any case it recommends the curtailment of the hours of sale, the observing of public holidays, and the reduction of the strength of spirits.

SCHOOL TEACHERS.

A mass meeting of public school teachers of all grades will be held in the Protestant Hall this morning at 10 o'clock, in regard to the absence of any provision in the Estimates for increased salaries. The teachers contend that under existing conditions they are not receiving a living wage.

ST. VINCENT'S HOSPITAL.

According to the 59th annual report of St. Vincent's Hospital, there were 2147 patients under treatment during the year ended December, 31, 1916. Of these 2384 were discharged cured, and 403 were relieved. The patients remaining in the hospital on December 31 numbered 164. The rate of mortality over all cases treated was 4.6 per cent. Since the hospital was opened in 1857 the number of patients admitted was 72,815, the out-patients were 288,008, and 37,708 operations were performed. The radium department played an important part in the hospital work during the past year, 101 patients having been treated.

PROHIBITION.

Mrs. W. Strang presided at a special meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which was held on Thursday at King's Hall, Hunter-street. The Rev. Principal Thatcher, Camden College, Chaplain Franceton, and Mrs. Nolan delivered addresses, and the following motion was carried:—"In view of the urgent need of utilising our national resources in men, money, ships, and food products to the utmost advantage, this public meeting would urge the State Government to bring in a measure to prohibit the manufacture and traffic in intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes."

SMALLPOX AT CESSNOCK.

A deputation from Cessnock interviewed the Acting Minister for Health (Mr. David Storey), and the Chief Health Officer (Dr. Paton) with regard to the provision of further accommodation for infectious diseases at the Cessnock Hospital. Dr. Paton said that if any diphtheria cases occurred they could be sent to Kurri Kurri, while if there was any more smallpox temporary accommodation could be erected at the Cessnock Hospital at very short notice. If people were vaccinated there was no reason to expect a spread of smallpox, and in a few weeks' time the present patients would be out of the hospital. As an instance of the immunity gained by vaccination, Dr. Paton cited the case of a woman with a family of five children, who was taken ill. As there was no one to look after the children they were vaccinated and put in the hospital with their mother, and not one of them caught the disease from her.

BUILDING MATERIALS.

A BUILDER PROFITS
by the use of material which, without sacrificing quality, will enable him to oust competitors on the question of price.
This is only ONE of the claims made for HARDIE'S "FIBROLITE" (Reg.),
AUSTRALIAN-MADE
ASBESTOS CEMENT SHEETS.

They save the cost of lath and plaster, the cost of paper, and, where painting is desired, it is only ONE-THIRD the cost of painting weatherboard.
They will never crack, chip, or rust. They are proof against White Ants, and perfectly FIRE-RESISTING. Insurance rates are 25 per cent. lower than that of weatherboard.
Again, the cost of studding is considerably less than that of wooden structures. No time is lost in "Setting." "Fibrolite" Cement Sheets can be fixed in all weathers.
"Fibrolite" cuts down labour costs. They are neat in appearance, easy to handle, and assist rapid construction.
In addition to all this, "Fibrolite," either in ceilings, partitions, walls, exteriors, or interiors, lends itself to beautiful artistic effects attractive to the prospective buyer.

Hardie's are also makers of "FIBROLITE"

RE ASBESTOLITE:
"After putting it to severe tests I have found it is all you have claimed for it, and am now specifying Asbestolite in all my Contracts."
He is only one of many Asbestolite enthusiasts.
It stands to reason that the Architect is the man who knows which is the profitable, reliable, and economical material to use in building.
Asbestolite does not crack, chip, or deteriorate—is fire-proof and weather-proof. Stocked in all handy sizes, to 10 x 4, and complete with Cornices, Angles, and Ventilators.

MEETINGS.

AUSTRALIAN JOCKEY CLUB.
The ANNUAL MEETING of the AUSTRALIAN JOCKEY CLUB will be held at the Offices of the Club, 6 Bligh-street, Sydney, on WEDNESDAY, 15th AUGUST, 1917, at 4 o'clock p.m.
BUSINESS:
1. To receive Committee's Report and Treasurer's Balance-sheet.
2. To elect a Committee and two Auditors for the ensuing Financial Year.
3. To Transact Ordinary Business.
Mr. Adrian Knox has given notice that he intends to move that the Rules 45 to 50 inclusive, in connection with the Accident Fund, as set out hereunder, be added to the Rules of the Club.
ACCIDENT FUND.
45. There shall be established a Fund to be called "The Accident Fund," for the purpose of providing a fund out of which compensation may be made in the manner and subject to the conditions hereinafter prescribed and to the Rules of Racing to owners, trainers, jockeys, apprentices, or stable-hands, or other persons for loss or damage incurred by accident arising out of and in the course of their business or employment, and for liability incurred by reason of any such accident.
46. The amount now standing to the credit of the "Distressed Jockeys' Fund" shall be forthwith transferred to the credit of the Accident Fund—and there shall also be paid to the Accident Fund the following:—
(a) All fees paid to the Australian Jockey Club for jockeys' licenses and permits to ride.
(b) All fees paid for a like purpose to any Association of Clubs holding registered meetings the Articles of which shall have been approved of by the Committee.
(c) All fees paid for a like purpose to the Newcastle and Broken Hill Registration Boards.
(d) All fees paid as contributions to the Accident Fund by or on behalf of any owner or trainer.
(e) All fines imposed at any Race Meeting where the Rules of Racing of the Australian Jockey Club are in force.
47. The Accident Fund, notwithstanding anything herein contained to the contrary, shall not be deemed to be a Trust Fund, but shall be and be deemed to be the absolute property of the Australian Jockey Club and be dealt with only as the Committee shall from time to time determine and direct. Nothing herein, or in regard to the constitution of the Fund, shall be deemed to create an Insurance Fund for horse-owners or any other persons, or to confer on any person any right of indemnity or other right whatever; the object of creating and maintaining the Accident Fund being not to insure Owners and Trainers or others against liability for accidents, but to create a fund out of which persons who may have incurred any loss or damage or any liability by reason of any accident may in the discretion of the Committee be compensated or indemnified to such extent, in such manner, and on such terms as the Committee may think fit.
48. The Committee may in their discretion require that the person injured shall proceed by ordinary course of law against his employer with a view of assessing the amount of compensation (if any) payable by the employer to him, and may in their discretion in such case refund to the employer any sum awarded, together with the costs of such proceedings.
49. The Committee may from time to time make, alter, or rescind regulations for the conduct of the business of the Accident Fund, including regulations for its investment, and for collecting and enforcing payment of contributions, and for considering applications for compensation made to the Committee, and deciding thereon, and for prescribing the mode in which applications shall be made, and dealt with, and disposed of. Such regulations shall in so far as they are not inconsistent with the rules have equal force and effect with them.
50. The Committee may appoint any three or more of their Members to be a sub-committee for the purpose of dealing with applications for compensation. Such sub-committee shall in every case report the decision arrived at to the Committee, who may confirm the same, or disallow the same, either wholly or in part.
Mr. Knox will also move—
That the Committee be authorised to provide out of the funds of the Club a sum equal to the net profit for the year, to be applied at the discretion of the Committee in aid of funds raised for patriotic purposes in connection with the War, or for similar funds raised for the benefit of any of the Allies.
C. W. CROPPER,
Secretary A.J.C.

PALING'S PIANOS—FULLY GUARANTEED.

Buy a Piano that will not get out of order after being in use for a few years, or even less.

A poor-toned Piano will mean more worry and expense; it will merely be an ornament in the household, instead of being a source of musical enjoyment.

It always pays to spend a little more and have a Piano in which you have every confidence, than to purchase an instrument made more for show than for use.

Buy your New Piano at Paling's, and you will be glad in the years to come.

ON THE LAND.

AUSTRALIAN SONG-BIRDS.

(BY W. M. SHERRIE.)

A recent statement by Mr. Gregory Mathews, who has had experience of both countries in an ornithological sense, on the relative merits of the song-birds of England and Australia has attracted a good deal of attention. It has also caused some surprise even in Australia. Mr. Mathews declared that he preferred the notes of the golden-breasted whistler (which used to be known as the Thickhead), the reed-warbler, the grey shrike thrush, and the butcher-bird to the notes of the English thrush or nightingale. He added that he considered the reed-warbler to be "in a class by itself." In this country we have taken it for granted that even the best of our native songsters were not in the same class as such famous birds as the nightingales, the thrush, the blackbird, or the mocking-bird of America. One of the reasons for this is that in the past very little of an authoritative character had been written concerning the vocal powers of the birds of this continent. What little was written and published had the effect of depreciating rather than enhancing the average Australian's estimate of the singing capacity of the birds of his native land. Adam Lindsay Gordon, for example (who should have known enough of Australia to realise the grotesque falsity and absurdity of his statement), gave world-wide publicity to the notion that Australia was a country of somewhat bizarre features, among them being "songless birds" and "scentless flowers." The poet might have used the phrase in accordance with poetic license, or merely to secure a melodious and picturesque image, but the thing was accepted as good "natural history," and is still regarded as such in other parts of the world.

Australian people, from childhood up, had been accustomed to reading or hearing glowing verbal accounts of the vocal wonders of such birds as the nightingale, the thrush, the linnet, and the mocking bird, while at the same time having their own birds spoken of slightingly in the manner affected by Marcus Clarke, Gordon, and others who knew little or nothing about the subject. Even now there are people so destitute of judgment in a matter of this kind that they deny the claims of the Australian magpie to be considered a song bird at all! Yet the late John Gould, the greatest bird student of them all, could find no words in which adequately to describe the carol of the magpie. "To describe the note of this bird," he said, "is beyond the power of my pen." Professor Alfred Russel Wallace was equally enthusiastic, and he was a man who devoted nine or ten years of his life to the continuous study of birds in their native haunts in the Malay Archipelago. He described the note as "a wonderfully modulated whistle, unequalled among European birds." Whether we regard the blithesome magpie as a "whistler," a caroller, or as a song-bird, there can be no mistake about its being one of the most delightful exponents of wild melody that is to be found among the birds of the world. If there are people who have any doubt on this point they would do well to make an effort to hear a group of magpies in full song in the early hours of a spring or an autumn morning.

The writer agrees with Mr. Mathews that the little reed-warbler—which has wonderful range and versatility of song, together with an exquisite quality of melody—is "in a class by himself;" he also has the greatest admiration for the golden whistler (a bird of superb singing powers), the grey thrush (which, however, pipes rather than sings), and the clarion-throated butcher bird; but he has never heard anything in the Australian bush so fine, or so thrilling, as a magpie chorus about the dawn of day. It may be conceded, of course, that in this respect the magpies have a great advantage over most of the other species of songsters, inasmuch as they commonly sing in groups instead of individually. To hear the golden whistler at his best one needs to visit some of the deep, heavily-timbered valleys in the region of the Clyde River, or other coastal districts, where the birds are numerous. In such localities the early hours of the day are made joyous to the last degree by the collective song of the whistlers. However, even when we have mentioned the reed-warbler, the thrush, the whistlers, the magpies, the butcher birds, and some others, we have not nearly exhausted the list of first-rate singing birds which are indigenous to Australia. There are the singing honey-eater (Ptilotis vittata) and the bell-bird (Oreoica cristata), for instance. In its singing moods the honey-eater in question is capricious and uncertain, but on occasions its loud note is delightful. For sustained effort in the production of melody I do not think that any of the bush songsters, with, perhaps, the exception of the reed-warbler, is the equal of the bell-bird. It is necessary to point out that this songster is not identical with the so-called bell-bird of the coastal districts—the bell minah (Manorhina melanophyra). The latter is a honey eater, whereas the crested bell-bird is an insect eater, and belongs to the wooded regions of the interior. As songsters there is no more comparison to be made between the two than there is between the silver-eye and the reed-warbler. Gould's collaborator, Gilbert, regarded the bell-bird as an accomplished ventriloquist; and that is the impression one gets when listening to and observing the song and the actions of the bird. At first the notes seem to come softly and swellingly from a distance. As the song proceeds they rise gradually, until one seems to be right in the centre of the flood of melody; then one discovers that the bird which seemed to be away off in the distance is close at hand, in all probability sitting quite still on a dead limb or a stump. The bell-birds may be heard at their best in the valleys of the Murray.

THE WOOL TRADE.

MAKING PREPARATION.

Wool is coming forward in good volume from the early shearing districts of this State, and a number of well-known brands from the west and north-west have been received during the week. Now that the sale of wool is by appraisement, at values that will show no variation from the beginning to the end of the season, growers have every inducement to rail consignments to the seaboard as speedily as possible. In ordinary periods there were market fluctuations, and some growers would act upon their judgment in the matter of selling early or late in the season. If the prospects were good early, then consignments came forward in volume as soon as shearing permitted; if, on the other hand, the market position seemed likely to improve as the season advanced, then there was no hurry to send portions of the clip in advance, but to go slow and forward consignments when most convenient. Now, with first come first served as the rule, it is only a matter of having the wool of 12 months' growth, or of good length, getting in early, and receiving the proceeds within 14 days after the signing of the appraisement catalogues.

Preparations are going forward for the acquisition of the current season's wool production, but arrangements are not yet complete; alterations in matters of detail are likely to be made, and no appraisement dates are yet fixed in any of the States. The central wool committee is revising the whole scheme, based upon the experience gained from January to June last. The acquisition system was not perfect, but anomalies were removed as the season progressed. Now the prospects are for a thorough revision; so when the appraisements commence there is sure to be installed much more effective machinery than was set up, for the first time in history, in January last. Another matter that is understood to be engaging the attention of the committee is that of basis of values. With regard to that the Australian Mercantile, Land, and Finance Company, Ltd., says:—"A number of matters are now having the attention of the central wool committee and the trade, among which is an amendment to the basis of values of last season, it having been found by experience that some qualities were relatively too low, this being particularly noticeable with coarse crossbreds and burry merinos, and it is hoped that the basis for these qualities will be improved. On the other hand, it may be necessary, in order to bring the clip in on the all round price of 15½d, to reduce slightly last season's prices for the best descriptions. Nothing, however, is settled on this point, although the matter is being carefully considered."

THE GROWERS' PART.

While preparations are going forward in those directions, all for the better and more satisfactory working of the acquisiton scheme during the ensuing season than last, there are several matters in which the growers can assist, both for themselves and those who handle their consignments. Growers, in the prices they receive, are always paid for the proper preparation of their wool for market; and the same principle holds good under appraisement as when the wool was sold at auction or by private treaty. Length, quality, and yield are the chief factors in valuation; consequently clips that are unskirted and uneven in quality may not be so accurately gauged and priced as those which show the yield and quality in a higher degree. In ordinary trade valuers generally go on an estimate when it is difficult to gauge the correct yield and quality; the estimate usually errs on the side of the buyer. It is the safest course to pursue, and careful buyers usually follow that principle. In the acquisition this practice may not be followed; but it is far safer for the grower to see that his clip is "turned the best side to London" rather than hide its light under the bushel of want of preparation. With regard to this aspect of the coming season, Dalgety and Company say:—"Under the conditions which obtain it is necessary that wools be more regularly graded as to quality and condition than in the past, and it is in growers' interests that the work should be carried out in a thorough manner, as wool, under the present scheme, has to be typed and yielded on a clean-washed basis. Careful attention should be paid to classing and grading, and the mixing of different types must be avoided as far as possible. With the experience gained from the working of the first appraisement scheme growers can rest assured that the present season's operations will be conducted even more satisfactorily."

RULE AS TO BRANDING OF BALES.

It is optional for growers to prepare their wool for market; some growers pay very great attention to it as an essential part of their business; others are not so particular. In the matter of branding, however, it is compulsory for growers to brand their bales of wool on the sides and in black colour. This is imperative, and applies to the whole of the wool that is to go into the season's clip. Clause 27 of the central wool committee's report states that "instructions have been received from the Army Contracts Wool Committee, London, that it is absolutely imperative for growers to understand that with the 1917-1918 clip station brands must be on the side only of wool bales, and station marking must be made in black colour, the ends of the bales being reserved for special counter marking in red for shipment." Exactly what will happen if these instructions are not carefully observed by growers is not stated; but it is probable such bales would be repacked in new bales at the expense of the consignor. It is unlikely that any grower would knowingly err, so the more widely known the rule is the better it will be for all concerned.

AVERAGE PRICES IN APPRAISEMENTS.

In the details of the Central Wool Committee's report on the result and administration of the acquisition, that closed on June 30 last, are the average prices of greasy and scoured at each appraisement in the various States. There were 10 appraisements in Sydney and Victoria, 5 in Brisbane and in Adelaide, 3 in Tasmania, and 14 in Western Australia. The highest average price for greasy in Sydney was at the fifth appraisement, when the average of the 45,037 bales in the grease came out at 17.01d per lb; the next best was at the fourth series, when 44,293 bales of greasy averaged 16.66d per lb, which was closely approached at the third series, when 46,366 bales averaged 16.20d per lb. The lowest average price was 9.75d per lb, at the ninth series, when small lots preponderated. The highest average in scoured was at the third series, when 2933 bales were appraised, coming out at 22.18d per lb. In Brisbane, on the other hand, the highest at any series was 15.47d in the grease, but as high as 28.54d for scoured, ranging from 13.58d to 15.47d in the grease, and from 24.34d to 28.54d in scoured. In Victoria the highest average in the grease was 15.96d for greasy, and 24.30d for scoured. The highest average for all the States in the grease was 17.73d, at the seventh series in Western Australia: Tasmania coming second with 17.67. The highest in scoured was 23.06d, at the first series in Adelaide; but Queensland came out consistently best with scoured. The averages in the six States compare as follow:—

AUSTRALIAN WOOL FOR AMERICA.

The American mail this week brought news of wool movements up to June 30. A few days earlier, a conference was held at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in connection with wool importations. Representatives were present of the Textile Alliance, the army, the navy, and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The "Textile World Journal" of June 30, referring to the subject, said that, "while the officials refuse to discuss the conference it is understood that they took up the matter of the 45,000 bales of wool to be released from Australia, which, it is said, will not be suitable for the making of army uniforms. It is understood that this wool will come to the country on Japanese ships. Some kind of an arrangement is looked for whereby this 45,000 bales can be exchanged with wool manufacturers for their stock on hand suitable for making army uniforms. No conclusions have yet been arrived at as to how this can be brought about and further conferences are contemplated."

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

There has been a large increase in the receipts of wool by rail during the week compared with the corresponding week last year, and a moderate increase by boat. Over 15,000 bales have come forward by rail since July 1, and nearly 9000 bales by boat. The tendency is now for wool arrivals to be early in order to take precedence in the appraisements, when they are held. The quantity received by rail and boat for the week and for the season compares with the corresponding periods last year, as follows:—

YANCO.

Mr. P. J. Le Bas, Farm 50, Leeton, writes:—Permit me to state my experiences of dairying on a 50-acre farm at Yanco. The following will show that I have been in actual want through the failure of my land to grow lucerne, which was what I took it up for, although I put in 40 acres of that crop. It was not through want of knowledge of dairying or cattle, for I had 15 years' previous experience in the Channel Islands, where I made a comfortable living on 15 acres of land. For three years my total returns from cows were £168. I have had my credit stopped at the stores. I had a writ issued against me, had the sheriff in possession, and have been practically bootless, while my family and I have lived for months on the sole returns of some 20 hens. I have lost five cows and two horses through starvation. During the five and a half years I have been here the only outing my wife has had was once to a concert and once to a picture show, and that was since I gave up dairying. In May, 1916, I sold the remainder of my cows, and took on outside work, such as ploughing, grading, painting, paper-hanging, coachbuilding, toy-making, dealing, etc. All these occupations I have found infinitely more profitable than dairying on Yanco.

I do not state this to invite sympathy, but to warn intending dairymen, for I am not the only victim who has suffered through placing too much confidence in pamphlets and so-called experts. In the Sydney Press of July 27 there appears an article dealing on dairying at Yanco, which states that over 20,000 cows made an average of 25/ per cow per month for a period of two years; but it does not state what area of land those cows occupied to produce it, which, to my mind, is a very important point. I might state that my cows are included in the above returns, and I dare say I could show good results if I carried one cow to 20 acres.

At the recent Royal inquiry, Judge Bevan awarded me £811 on surrender of my farm. Out of that I have to pay a Savings Bank loan of £250, leaving me with about £550. The Government offers me £100 and keep my farm, and £100 wiped off my liabilities to the Commission, which amounts to £608 to June, 1916. So that, instead of walking out with £550, I am left with a worthless farm and a debt of £400 to the commission, and further liabilities for rent and water to date. I would like to add that I induced my father-in-law to come out from the Channel Islands on the rosy prospects held out to us in 1912. Two years ago he abandoned his farm at a loss of £700, and returned home a poorer but a wiser man.

WOMEN FARMERS.

The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. W. C. Grahame) states that his department has now arranged to take over from the Department of Labour and Industry the training of the 20 women students who are at present in residence at the Pitt Town Agricultural Training Farm. When the Department of Lands came to the conclusion that the Pitt Town Farm was one of the most suitable institutions where returned soldiers could get experience in farming operations before taking up land on their own account, the Department of Agriculture was approached with a view to the transfer of the women students, and the result of the negotiations is that these ladies are now to be accommodated at the experiment farm at Cowra. Before the transfer was decided on, two of the students from Pitt Town made a preliminary visit to Cowra for the purpose of reporting to their fellow students on its suitability or otherwise for their training, and as a result of this visit the students, as a whole, elected to make the change. It is not proposed to extend the school at present, but in the near future the Minister hopes to be able to accommodate a larger number of students, and when a public announcement will be made, when applications will be received from young ladies who desire this class of training.

WHEAT POOL PAYMENT.

The Minister of Agriculture announces that the second advance against wheat delivered to the 1916-17 season pool is now being paid by the banks. Mr. Grahame states that the rate of the advance is 6d per bushel, less the dockages for under quality shown upon the certificates. This means that approximately £800,000 is being distributed amongst the wheat farmers of this State.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

The Minister for Lands, Mr. W. G. Ashford, has given instructions for the immediate inspection of about 6000 acres of land on the Comboyne, about 24 miles from Gloucester railway station, with a view to its utilisation for the settlement of returned soldiers. The land, which forms part of a Crown lease area, was brought under the notice of the Minister some years ago by Mr. Morton, M.L.A., as being especially suitable for settlement in comparatively small areas. It is brush country, and is said to comprise rich volcanic soil about 40ft deep. It is at an altitude of 2000ft, and the climate is ideal. It is considered suitable for mixed farming, including dairying and the growing of cold climate fruits, and is easy of access, being approached by a fairly good road from the railway at Gloucester to the Upper Bowman. It is estimated that the expenditure of about £1000 would meet all requirements in improving the road to open up the area. Mr. R. A. Price, M.L.A., who has also brought this land under the Minister's notice, with special regard to making it available for soldiers, is in entire accord with Mr. Morton as to its suitability for settlement. In accordance with Mr. Ashford's instructions, a staff surveyor and an inspector of the Returned Soldiers' Settlement Branch, will make the necessary inspection almost immediately.

WALBUNDRIE ESTATE.

CULCAIRN.—The well-known Walbundrie Estate, near Culcairn, is to be purchased by the Government, and negotiations are practically completed. The estate comprises nearly 16,000 acres, and is highly improved, almost every acre being capable of cultivation. The land is to be utilised for the settlement of returned soldiers. This property was owned by Captain Geoffrey Kiddle, who was killed in Mesopotamia.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1917.

THE WAR ANNIVERSARY.

Three years ago to-day the great resolve was made, and an expectant Empire breathed a sigh of relief. From the Admiralty there was flashed one little word which signalised the greatest event in the history of our Empire. "Go!" it said. And from wherever they happened to be at that moment, waiting for the signal, the ships of the Royal Navy went straight to their duty. At no long interval the "contemptible little army" followed in its duty across the narrow seas to Mons and the Marne, and thereafter the part of all the Britains in this war was made manifest and continues to this day. And to-day we commemorate the third anniversary of Great Britain's declaration of war by pledging ourselves anew to the honour and the justice of our cause, and by undertaking to pursue it to the end. We have been at war now for three long years; and as our minds travel back to Sarajevo and the figures of a murdered Archduke and his assassin Princip rise before us we find ourselves marvelling at the smallness of the spark that set the world afire. It was but the excuse. "Let us be rid of all this canting humbug," said the German publicist and writer, Maximilian Harden, after the rape of Belgium had shocked the civilised world—"We wanted the war. Why should we deny it?" This is not the time for considering the causes of the war, nor for recalling the phrases of the guilty Emperor; rather is it a time for taking stock of our position and taking new heart for the great task that lies before us. It is well that we should meet on this day to reaffirm our attitude of three years ago, to state again our resolve that for the same reason that we entered the war we shall continue it to the end—to the only end that will satisfy free men. If we would be free, if we would save ourselves and the world at large from the menace of Prussian militarism, we must fight. There is no alternative. Germany herself has stated it—World-power or downfall! That is the issue as set forth by her Treitschkes, her Bernhardis, her Prussian rulers. It is war to the bitter end, and Germany is still waging it with all the might and ingenuity at her command, and with that same frightfulness with which she began it. It little serves to blink the facts. We have, it is true, swept German commerce from the seas, and our sailors still watch in vain for the German fleet to come out; but day by day, and week by week, we go on losing our merchant ships to the submarine. This is one of the most serious problems that we have to face. And meantime on the land the warring nations are locked in a death-embrace, and we know not how long it will last. Brilliant as has been the recent advance of the British and French forces, there is a long way yet to go.

It is well that we should realise the position. It is well that we in Australia should consider our own position in relation to the war. The people of this country have never before been put to such a test. It is not only a test of endurance; it is a test of all the qualities, physical and moral and spiritual, that we possess. It has been said that no nation has ever become great that has not had to fight for its existence. And now for the first time Australia is fighting for its existence. There are too many of our people who do not realise it, and probably they never will realise it—unless Australia becomes a German slave State. It is not difficult to understand. We are so far from the centre of the war that distance is apt to give us a sense of security. We have lived happy, contented lives in the past in a land where it is "always afternoon," and we have never had the hand of Fate to scourge us to high national endeavour and sacrifice—never until now. But the war, though it embraces the whole world in its folds, seems so far away. We have sent three hundred thousand men away, but our lives are still ordered very much as they were when the first hundred thousand had gone. We continue with the trivial round, the common task, as of old; and except for reading of the progress of events in the newspapers we do not even pause to think much about the war. We have come to look upon it almost as a necessary condition of our existence, and beyond a passing thought that it will end some time we do not let it bother us much. And, indeed, it is true that the war is a necessary condition of our existence. Our whole future depends upon it. On the outcome of the war depends the very existence of Australia as a free country. It will assuredly end some time, but it should be our endeavour to see that it ends in victory for our own arms, and that it ends as quickly as possible. That result will not be brought about by sitting at our firesides and reading the newspapers. Every fit man should be offering himself for duty at the front, and those who are not fit should be helping those who are, whether it be with their money or with their work in the many patriotic fields that are open to them. Australia must go on providing its 7000 men a month; New South Wales must go on providing its quota of 2300. We cannot allow our forces at the front to dwindle down to nothing for the want of reinforcements. Only in yesterday's "Herald" there was printed a message from General Birdwood, who commands these forces and has time and again expressed his pride in them. "It would be a great pity," he writes to Lieutenant-Colonel Owen, "if some of our divisions had to be split up, and I am afraid it looks like it." That it should be necessary for these words to be written is a reproach to the young manhood of Australia. We have seen how, lately, the Australian soldiers fighting on the Western front have added fresh glory to the name already won by them; but there can be no great advance without losses. Someone must be found to step into the place of the man who falls. It may be that some scheme may yet be evolved for getting the men under the voluntary system, but it must be done quickly, for there is no time to be lost. And for the rest, it is necessary that all men and women who value the precious privileges they enjoy should awake to the stern reality of the war and do what in them lies to bring it to a victorious conclusion. This is the lesson we have to learn after three years of war. As we enter upon the fourth year, with, let us hope, renewed faith and hope, let us see to it that our courage does not falter and that so far as we are concerned there shall be no dishonourable peace. Strong in faith, resolute of purpose, ready for all sacrifice, we shall win this war, but not otherwise.

No easy hopes or lies
Shall bring us to our goal,
But iron sacrifice
Of body, will, and soul.

ASPECTS OF THE STRIKE.

This strike will not prove utterly deplorable if it compels the Australian people to recognise the existence of certain dangers to the social life of the country which they have hitherto ignored. These dangers have not been created by the strike, nor are they presented by it for the first time. They have been active in our midst, damaging the prospects of the country, and undermining the foundations of its progress for many years past. This strike, even if the Government were ignominiously to submit to the threats directed against it, would be only one and not the most disastrous of their manifestations. It is, however, more likely than anything that has gone before to compel people to consider the conditions in which it has originated, to realise their meaning, and to make up their minds upon them. The ostensible cause of the dispute is so inadequate to account for the mischief threatened, and so plainly fictitious, that public attention must go beyond the surface to look for motives and origins. No man can believe that a body of his fellow-citizens have undertaken to dominate the State, and, if necessary, to coerce it merely because they are called upon to follow a system which is accepted without any sense of grievance by every other member of their calling. He will rather treat this dispute as a symptom, relate it to others, and endeavour to estimate their bearing on the future of his country. The result of his inquiry is an apparently irreconcilable contradiction. The most experienced citizen of the world, after watching the Australian army at work or at rest, would envy the future of themselves and their fellow-citizens. They do their work with dash and efficiency. They are courteous and self-denying. They are amenable to discipline without the faintest sign of servility or dependence. Without ostentation or contempt for the feelings of others they have the keenest sense of patriotism and pride of birth. Observers who could compare them with soldiers of other nations in the vital test of war could have no doubt that their country would preserve its freedom to the end of time, and would be as vigorous in the competitions of peace as on the battlefields. The impression produced by an inquiry into the doings of their home-keeping countrymen during these last tragic three years would be very different. The inquirer would ask himself whether all the patriotism and the energy had been transported. In place of patriotism he would find a refusal to admit any community of interest between one group and another. Instead of physical energy he would find the indolence which is satisfied by a bare subsistence easily gained; instead of mental energy he would find men refusing to accept the consequences of their actions, or to allow facts to be called by their right names. The results of sloth and disunion would not be mistaken by anyone who has come in contact, however indirectly, with the facts of war. A nation may tolerate these seeds of ruin for many years and preserve the appearance of prosperity obtained with little exertion. But a catastrophe is certain, and may come at any moment. A country which has the seeds of greatness within it may preserve its independence if it is prepared to sacrifice the best of its manhood. But even that sacrifice may be unavailing if a nation has neglected its defences and abandoned its unity for too long. The penalty will then be loss of economic and political freedom at once, and will fall heaviest on those who have the greatest stake in the country, because their own lives and those of their children are spent in it.

Since Mr. Hughes's remedy of deportation is too heroic to be practical the country is left to seek for the intangible and impersonal causes of the present troubles in order to find the appropriate remedy. Some of them are less deep-seated than others. Temporary conditions have given a few quickwitted but shallowminded agitators their chance of inflaming discontent by the use of catchwords applicable to the conditions of other countries. Prejudices inherited from, and justified by, our own history have prepared the minds of their hearers to be inflamed by malicious or ignorant teaching. The conditions of union organisation have given the inflammable and inflammatory elements a power of directing the union against the wishes of either their elected executive or the majority of their fellow-members. The arbitration system has developed a type of secretary who has earned his position by brains and work, and has gained a sense of responsibility. The executive is composed in the vast majority of cases of men who can take long views and are sensitive to the interests of their fellow-workers. But in many unions prominence has been gained by men of a class which is neither experienced nor able nor disinterested. Such men have made the present strike, and will make others if they continue to be tolerated as hitherto. If their power could be checked by deportation nine Australians out of ten would rejoice to see them go. Since this protection is unavailable other measures must be found of protecting the country against them. All forms of protection will be found to be capable of statement under two heads, or possibly under one. The first is a sense of reality, the second a sense of the unity of country. A Government which has weighed its words will not retract them by giving a breach of the law another name. A people which sees the Government challenged must support it at any sacrifice. Men who continually hold up the national industries must know that they have chosen for us all a path which leads to poverty, and possibly to slavery, and must be taught immediately that their lawlessness will not be tolerated. A sense of national unity is only one aspect of a sense of reality. It is so plainly ignored in this strike because the employers attacked are a branch of the Government, and the strikers, by virtue of their employment, enjoy exceptional advantages. But in reality it is ignored in this country in every strike by which the people are deprived of the use of commodities vital to their industry and their subsistence. In every country a minority may rebel if its liberty or its subsistence is challenged, and it has no other refuge than rebellion. But in this country there is always such a refuge, and in this strike there has been no such challenge. The strikers have forgotten what their leaders would not care to remember, that in this country union workers are better off than in any other part of the world. They are protected in all circumstances by the Courts, and they have a controlling voice in the election of Parliament. Their representatives make laws and regulate wages. In no other country is there less justification for a strike which threatens the Government with compulsion or with the cessation of all traffic; in none should there be a greater or more general condemnation for a series of acts which, if they are not checked, must bring about a national suicide.

THE PRESENT CRISIS.

(WRITTEN BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL IN DECEMBER, 1845.)

When a deed is done for Freedom, through the broad earth's aching breast
Runs a thrill of joy prophetic, trembling on from east to west,
And the slave, where'er he cowers, feels the soul within him climb
To the awful verge of manhood, as the energy sublime
Of a century bursts full-blossomed on the thorny stem of Time.

* * * * *

For mankind are one in spirit, and an instinct bears along,
Round the earth's electric circle, the swift flash of right or wrong;
Whether conscious or unconscious, yet Humanity's vast frame
Through its ocean-sundered fibres feels the gush of joy or shame;—
In the gain or loss of one race all the rest have equal claim.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by for ever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Hast thou chosen, O my people, on whose party thou shalt stand,
Ere the Doom from its worn sandals shakes the dust against our land?
Though the cause of Evil prosper, yet 'tis Truth alone is strong,
And, albeit she wander outcast now, I see around her throng
Troops of beautiful, tall angels, to enshield her from all wrong.

Backward look across the ages and the beacon-moments see,
That, like peaks of some sunk continent, jut through Oblivion's sea;
Not an ear in court or market for the low foreboding cry
Of those Crises, God's stern winnowers, from whose feet earth's chaff must fly;
Never shows the choice momentous till the judgment hath passed by.

Careless seems the great Avenger; history's pages but record
One death-grapple in the darkness 'twixt old systems and the Word;
Truth for ever on the scaffold, Wrong for ever on the throne,—
Yet that scaffold sways the Future, and, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above His own.

We see dimly in the Present what is small and what is great,
Slow of faith, how weak an arm may turn the iron helm of fate;
But the soul is still oracular; amid the market's din,
List the ominous stern whisper from the Delphic cave within,— "They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin."

* * * * *

They have rights who dare maintain them; we are traitors to our sires,
Smothering in their holy ashes Freedom's new-lit altar-fires;
Shall we make their creed our jailer? Shall we, in our haste to slay,
From the tombs of the old prophets steal the funeral lamps away
To light up the martyr-fagots round the prophets of to-day?

New occasions teach new duties; Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth;
Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! we ourselves must Pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea,
Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Alfred Allen, who was for many years member for Waverley in the Legislative Assembly, and whip for the Parkes Administration, is seriously ill.

Mr. T. W. Kirk, who is in charge of the horticultural branch of the New Zealand Department of Agriculture, is on a visit to Sydney.

WAR PROFITS BILL.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the absence of the Federal Treasurer (Sir John Forrest) the Assistant Minister (Mr. Groom) to-day received, in private, a deputation representing about 1000 small business firms in Sydney regarding the War-time Profits Assessment Bill. Mr. Groom stated subsequently that the deputation made representations to him as to the manner in which the bill affected them. The Acting Commissioner for Taxation (Mr. Ewing), who was present, explained the operations of the bill, and his explanation met some of their objections to the measure. The members of the deputation made several suggestions, and he, Mr. Groom, promised to bring them before the Treasurer for his consideration.

In reply to a message sent by the Sydney Chamber of Commerce to a reliable quarter at the seat of government, Wellington, New Zealand, stating that the Commonwealth Government is introducing a War-time Profits Bill, and inquiring why New Zealand should [illegible] similar law, the following telegraphic reply has been received:—"Excess Profits Act was in force here last year, but is not being re-enacted this year on account of (1) the Government admitting that it was most inequitable, and it was generally condemned as a tax on development, pressing especially on young, active businesses, while old, stagnant businesses escape; (2) the machinery was too elaborate to enable collection of the revenue when required; (3) failure to reach the Government's estimate. Graduation substituted."

MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES.

Information has been received by Mrs. C. B. Hollis, 22 Hopetoun-street, Paddington, that her son, Lance-corporal R. E. Hollis, has been mentioned in despatches by Sir Douglas Haig for repairing the lines of communication between the front line and headquarters during a very heavy enemy bombardment.

Mrs. J. C. Martin, of Plumpton, has been notified that her husband, Sergeant J. C. Martin, has been mentioned in despatches by Sir Douglas Haig, for distinguished and gallant conduct in the field, and devotion to duty. He was recently awarded the Military Medal.

NEW FRONT VIOLENTLY ATTACKED.

ENEMY COMPLETELY REPULSED.

FIGHTING OVER SODDEN GROUND.

LONDON, Aug. 3.

The later communiques from the West front do not mention the weather, so it is probable that the rain has ceased. Very violent counter-attacks by the Germans on the new Allied line were everywhere unsuccessful.

BRITISH.

THURSDAY, ISSUED 2.25 P.M.

During the past 48 hours incessant rain has fallen. The enemy yesterday afternoon succeeded at great cost in obtaining a foothold in our advanced positions near the Ypres-Roulers railway. Our counter-attack drove him out from all points, and we completely re-established our former line.

We carried out a successful raid south-east of Hargicourt.

THURSDAY, ISSUED AT 11.45 P.M.

The enemy this morning and afternoon violently but unsuccessfully attempted to recover ground north-east of Ypres.

Regardless of the increasing severity of the losses strong forces repeatedly attacked positions between the Ypres-Roulers railway and St. Julien. We in every case broke up and dispersed the advancing lines.

FRENCH.

THURSDAY, ISSUED 4.5 P.M.

Bad weather continues in Belgium.

FRIDAY, ISSUED 1 A.M.

In Belgium our artillery is dominating the German artillery, whose activity has increased east and north of Bixschoote.

GERMAN.

THURSDAY, ISSUED 6.50 P.M.:

We repulsed the enemy in Flanders everywhere in heavy fighting, and frequently brought forward our battle lines by counter-attacks. We took several hundred prisoners.

THE GERMAN VIEW.

It is reported from Amsterdam that it is calm behind the German front, in Flanders Forty thousand Germans were concentrated at Campine last week, and were hurried to the fighting line.

The "Frankfurter Zeitung," discussing the battle, says that the Germans have adopted new tactics. They no longer allow themselves to be shot to pieces in the trenches. They yield elastically, and, with fresh strength, throw back the attacker before he has dug in. The attacker merely occupies the craters in the defensive forefield fronting the chief German line, and there will be a bitter struggle in that field in the next few days.

SOLDIERS' STORIES.

The first batch of English, Scottish, and Welsh wounded has arrived in London. When interviewed the men stated that the battle was waged by both sides with unprecedented ferocity. German positions were stormed and carried in the teeth of the most determined opposition. Countless masses of Germans, including many youths, were flung into the conflict, which swiftly became a carnage.

A sergeant said he had been 32 months at the front, and had never seen anything like such a battle. The guns blasted the defences to smithereens. When the signal was given the British swept across the open in thousands. The ground trembled beneath them. Neither friend nor foe knew whither to go for security. Every inch of the earth before the British comprised battered and shapeless heaps. The area ahead was littered with corpses in heaps of German officers and men, huddled in all positions. This explains the fewness of the prisoners. Instead of bringing back thousands to the cages, the British left many of the enemy strewn on the battlefield. The few surviving our guns advanced with agonising screams of "Kamerad." Even the Prussians were mightily glad to be rescued from the furnace.

"Some of the enemy regiments fought to the death, and used their weapons like madmen," said the sergeant. "The blood in our lads was up, too, and one or two of our county regiments can claim to have beaten the Kaiser's best in the bloodiest hand-to-hand fighting."

Some Middlesex bombers cleared out the dugouts near the Ypres-Comines canal. The bombs, in some instances, were dropped through ventilating holes.

A Canadian, entering a dugout in the same district, found a store of champagne. Having regaled himself, he discovered in an adjoining chamber a German officer, hiding in bed. He led his captive to the British lines.

Many snipers fired at wounded British soldiers.

The Australians near Hollebeke, lost no time in dealing with Germans who would not surrender. One battalion bayoneted about 100 in a short, sharp fight. The survivors were very submissive.

"ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY."

A high military authority discussing the battle on the Western front says that the Germans must not expect a long respite. Our guns will soon be again hammering them relentlessly. Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's plans have been already carried out to the fullest degree. The objectives were fixed according to the artillery's capacity, and the troops everywhere reached the pre-arranged line. They advanced at one point beyond the line arranged upon, but fortunately found the slightest resistance. Therefore the result of the battle was entirely satisfactory. The armies, despite the miserable weather, were in the highest glee at the latest proof of the enemy's vulnerability. The attackers were mostly English, Scottish, and Welsh, with a few Canadians, and a small body of Australians and New Zealanders on the extreme right, where the objective was short. The Anzacs fought with the same terrible energy as they have always done.

THE HEROIC WELSH.

The correspondent of the "Petit Parisien" writes:—After the first day's formidable bound the Allied troops contented themselves with repulsing strong counter-attacks, especially in the Ypres sector. The Germans threw in formidable massed forces, but the British endured the struggle. The heavy artillery continues its devastation, though the sodden ground renders it less effective.

When the Welsh had cleared all the enemy trenches with grenades they penetrated into St. Julien on three sides. Fierce street fighting followed. The Welsh had to lay siege to every house in turn. The carnage was frightful, but the Welsh covered themselves with glory. The Prussian Guard obeyed their orders to die on the spot. No prisoners were taken, but one young prisoner taken elsewhere declared that the Guards were promised that they would not be asked to participate in this fight. They were to constitute the last reserve, but as things were going badly they had to go forward. Only two out of 150 were left alive.

The tanks did great work. One attacked a concrete redoubt and all the occupants surrendered. Another made for a spinney which was bristling with machine-guns. The tank crushed everything flat, and the garrison surrendered.

On Tuesday, surprised by the Welshmen near Pilkem, three battalions of Prussian Guards who were marching in echelon formation were cut to pieces by machine-guns, grenades, and bayonet fighting.

AMAZING AIRMEN.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, telegraphing from the British front in Flanders on Thursday night, says:—The weather is still abominable. The battlefield has been waterlogged by ceaseless rainstorms, but the fighting continues. The enemy is strongly counter-attacked northward of Frezenburg. Our artillery and machine guns swept them down. The Germans suddenly attacked two hours later, emerging from a dense smoke barrage. Our guns poured shells on to this ground, which we regained in the evening.

The German gunfire is intense over the greater part of his lost territory. His long-range guns are shelling the region far behind our lines. The situation is exactly the same as at the end of the first day of the battle.

The Australians and New Zealanders were allotted difficult country on the extreme right of the attack below Warneton, where the enemy had gone to great trouble to wire the hedges and cover the shell-holes with wire-netting, hiding machine guns and snipers. When the New Zealanders took La Basse Ville it was a mere huddle of broken bricks. It had already been taken and lost. But the New Zealanders, once established, firmly held the place, despite the fact that the cellars were temporarily useless, being choked with dead.

The Australians, after hard fighting, captured an old windmill near La Basse Ville, which is an important point, because it is standing on a knoll. Waves of Germans in the morning advanced across the Warneton-Gapaard-road, and, encircling the windmill, compelled the Australians to evacuate it. But, after several hours' shelling, the Australians, at midnight, returned and routed out the garrison, and firmly hold the mill again.

Our airmen performed unimaginable feats, directing machine-gun fire down the chimneys of buildings, and then, flying round to the front, squiring streams of lead through the open doors.

One pilot, with the utmost daring, played havoc with an aerodome. He bombed a shed and played a machine-gun in at the doorways. He bombed a second and third shed, and then his releasing lever failed. He ascended, calmly adjusted the lever, and dropped a bomb between a shed and a train, damaging both. Meantime, the amazed Germans manned a machine-gun. The pilot scattered the gunners with a burst of bullets at a range of 20 feet. He ascended to adjust another ammunition drum, and returned, and came tripping across the grass, firing at the sheds, where the mechanics were cowering. Returning, he overtook a marching column, and swooped and dispersed it with a stream of bullets. Next, he brought down a German aeroplane, and, descending, machine-gunned the Germans who had gathered round it. Finally, he exhausted his ammunition by firing at the windows of a passenger train.

A boy of 18 pleaded to be allowed to fly across the German lines. The commander eventually consented, provided he was accompanied by an older pilot. The boy soon lost his companion in a rainstorm. He then chased a motor car carrying two German staff officers, one of whom fired with an automatic revolver. The boy pulled his own revolver, dropped to a height of 10ft, and killed the officer. The corpse was dragged into a house, which the boy machine-gunned, and on which he dropped an incendiary bomb.

One air unit on Tuesday flew for an aggregate period of 396 hours, fired 11,000 rounds from machine-guns at ground targets, destroyed six German aeroplanes, and set fire to a balloon.

GERMAN COUNCIL OF WAR

It is reported from Amsterdam that the German Emperor has summoned a council of war, which will meet in Brussels to-day (Thursday). It will be attended by the Crown Prince (commanding on the Aisne front), Marshal von Hindenburg (Commander-in-Chief), General von Ludendorff (Chief of Staff), Prince Rupprecht (commander in Northern France and Flanders), Admiral von Capelle (Minister for the Navy), and Duke Albrecht of Wurtemburg (commander of the armies on the Lorraine and Switzerland fronts).

THE PUNCTUAL RAIN.

Mr. C. E. W. Bean, Commonwealth Press correspondent with the A.I.F., cables from the British Headquarters under date of August 1:—Yesterday evening their descended punctually the downpour which has so often followed the greatest British attacks. It found British and French digging in beyond villages which were household words in the far away beginnings of the war, beyond Passchendaele, beyond Pilkem, Saint Julien, and Hollebeke. Descendants of famous regiments are at this moment looking out from newly-dug trenches across country which was familiar to their forerunners, generations ago. In their share of yesterday's fighting the Australians received two small counter attacks before 9 o'clock in the morning, which were driven off. A more serious attack after dark drove out the troops from one of the captured posts, but about midnight, the Australians recaptured it. This fighting, though on a small scale, compared with the whole huge struggle, was well carried out. Several machine guns were taken, and 30 prisoners.

NEW ZEALANDERS IN BATTLE

The Paris "Journal" reports that the New Zealanders in the recent advance showed the most splendid spirit. They seized the crossroads and a machine-gun redoubt at La Basse Ville after a terrific hand-to-hand fight, and, despite two great counter-attacks, they held on firmly.

FRENCH ENTHUSIASM.

M. Painleve has telegraphed to Lord Derby (British Minister for War) stating: "The advance has aroused enthusiasm in France. The heroism of your troops has dealt the Germans one of the heaviest blows in the war."

GERMAN CASUALTIES.

Reports from Paris estimate that the German casualties on the first day of the attack were 20,000.

LONDON TO WELCOME AMERICANS.

Several American regiments, bearing arms, with banners flying and bands playing, will shortly march through London. The War Office is supervising the arrangements. The people of London are preparing a great ovation.

RUSSIAN DEMOCRATS CONFER.

WAR-WEARINESS IN THE ARMY.

"STERN AND REPRESSIVE MEASURES."

LONDON, Aug. 3.

A Petrograd message says there has been a continuous joint session of the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates and Peasants' delegates since Sunday, to which have been added 100 provincial delegates. There are representatives from all of the fronts, and the Socialist Ministers are also taking part.

Reports from the army delegates were very grave. Representatives of the Second, Ninth, Tenth, and Twelfth armies reported that war-weariness was the real cause of the disorganisation of the whole army. The delegates recommended stern and repressive measures which are necessary to strengthen the position of the army committees.

While praising the chivalry of the lower-grade officers, the delegates declared that the frame of mind of the higher command was opposed to the revolution.

Reports from Petrograd confirm the statement that General Brussiloff has resigned his post as Russian Commander-in-Chief, and that General Korniloff has been appointed to the position.

The London newspapers deeply regret General Brussiloff's resignation. They recall the fact that General Korniloff fought with the Boers against the British.

General Tcheremisoff, commander of the Eighth Army, has succeded General Korniloff in command of the south-western front. General Polovtzoff will command one of the fronts. The Cossack general, Vassilovski, will command the Petrograd district.

The Government has telegraphed to the Ambassadors in the Allied capitals an assurance that every measure is being taken on the front to reorganise the army for victory, and that the Government is also establishing an administration capable of guiding the country through a regeneration based on the revolution.

[General Korniloff has had a somewhat romantic career. Early in the war he had charge of a force in the Carpathians region, which, after successful fighting, was surrounded and captured by the Austrians. Korniloff and two others escaped from a prison camp, and set out to walk across Hungary. They were rigorously pursued. Korniloff's two companions were shot, but the general succeeded in reaching the Roumanian frontier. He was next heard of as commandant in Petrograd, but he resigned that office soon after the revolution—it is believed, because of political interference with military discipline. Then Korniloff appeared in command of the Russian armies south of the Dniester, which, a few weeks ago were successfully advancing, occupying Halicz, and crossing the Lomnica River. When the Russian front north of the Dniester broke, and the agitators led the troops in a precipitate retreat, Korniloff had to retire swiftly to avoid being cut off. From the little that is known of him, he is believed to be a successful leader, an iron disciplinarian, and a good organiser.]

FURTHER WITHDRAWAL.

The Russian communique issued on Thursday at 6.55 p.m. says:—

Between the Zbrucz and Dniester our troops abandoned positions north-east of Khotin.

Between the Dniester and Pruth the enemy assumed the offensive along our bank of the Dniester, and occupied a number of positions. We are retiring eastwards.

We fell back west of the Putna River.

We drove back the enemy near Moldavia and took 154 prisoners. We fell back slightly in the region of Mount Pucha and Mount Lamuntelu.

ADVANCE OF THE ENEMY.

German pressure is being aimed in the direction of Kamenetz and Podolsk and towards Odessa.

The Austrians and Germans are gradually conquering Bukovina, and are now within ten miles of Czernovitz, on the north, and are drawing near it on the south-west.

The Russians southward of the Dniester are still rapidly withdrawing. The enemy on the southern bank has entered the Russian province of Bessarabia.

The Russians have now lost 90 miles of territory between Kalusz and Husiatyn. There have been furious encounters around the latter place, the Russians capturing 100 prisoners.

The military situation is still improving as a result of General Korniloff's stringent measures, and many of the disaffected and mutinous regiments have returned to the front.

NEUTRAL SHIPS AND SUBMARINES.

It is reported from Copenhagen that the crew of the Norwegian steamer Benguela (which was insured for £160,000, and was sunk by a submarine early in July while on a voyage from England to Philadelphia) state that she left Bristol on June 7 for Philadelphia, and was stopped on the 15th in the mid-Atlantic by a big German submarine. The commander of the submarine placed a prize crew aboard, and compelled the Benguela to act as motorship for a fortnight, while the submarine made several long cruises, returning on one occasion with a captured Spanish ship. Eventually the crew of the Benguela were landed at Cadiz. It is believed that the Benguela is still the mothership for submarines.

The Norwegian steamers Glydenfris and Hildur (961 tons) were sunk by a submarine in Spanish waters. The crews were rescued.

AMERICAN TRANSPORT ENCOUNTER.

It is reported now from Washington that the Admiral who convoyed the American transports to France has supplied a detailed report of the encounter between U-boats and the transports. This shows that the submarines attacked twice, and that one of them was possibly destroyed.

ANGRY NORWEGIANS.

A Madrid message says that the Government has interned and disarmed the commander of the submarine B23, whom shipwrecked Norwegians attacked in a street in Ferrol, recognising the captain as the torpedoer of their ship. The police arrested the assailants.

FALKENHAYN GOES TO TURKEY.

The "Daily Telegraph" reports that General von Falkenhayn has assumed charge of the Turkish forces, and has inspected the Syrian front. It is significant that he has been sent such a distance to encounter General Sir Edmund Allenby (who has just taken charge in Egypt and South Palestine). The selection is easily explained. The German General Staff undoubtedly considers that it would be most inconvenient for the German Emperor's plans if the victor of Arras (General Allenby) also achieved a conquest in Palestine.

BATTLES ON FRENCH FRONT.

LONDON, Aug. 3.

The communiques show that there has been further sharp fighting on the French front.

FRENCH.

THURSDAY, ISSUED 4.5 P.M.

Great artillery activity continues on the Aisne front, east of the Braye-Laonnais sector and west of Craonne.

A violent artillery struggle has occurred north-west of Verdun, on the left bank of the Meuse. The Germans re-attacked our sector at Avocourt Wood, but without result.

FRIDAY, ISSUED 1 A.M.

We prevented an attempted attack and stopped two enemy attacks east of Cerny.

There was reciprocal artillery fire on the left of the Meuse.

Between July 21 and 31 we brought down 20 aeroplanes and two balloons, and caused 21 aeroplanes to descend. Ten flying squadrons threw 41,000 kilograms of projectiles over stations at Roulers, Metz, Thionville, and elsewhere, besides attacking factories, cantonments, bivouacs, and munition depots, causing considerable damage.

GERMAN.

THURSDAY, ISSUED 6.50 P.M.

We repulsed five French attacks on Chemin-des-Dames.

The French fruitlessly attacked on the west bank of the Meuse.

AMERICA'S CONTROL OF EXPORTS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.

Dr. Nansen, who is at the head of the Norwegian mission which has visited the United States to arrange for supplies, states that Norway's exports to Germany consist almost entirely of large quantities of fish, which is in accordance with an agreement made with England. Dr. Nansen hinted that Norway might be agreeable to make 1,000,000 tons of Norwegian shipping available to the Allies in exchange for the privilege of importing necessities from America. Norway will starve unless she obtained fats, grain, and sugar from the United States.

President Wilson's embargo on exports of ship steel, unless used for war purposes, is designed to prevent inflated prices. It will affect Japan's shipbuilding contracts, and it is believed may force many of her ships into the Atlantic trade.

The Washington correspondent of the "New York Sun" says that as a result of America's control of exports Norway has guaranteed that supplies shipped to her will not be sent to Germany. Holland has offered to exchange ships for food. Sweden has placed sweeping restrictions on brass and other metal used for munitions, thus cutting off supplies from Germany.

The Senate has passed a resolution authorising negotiations with the Allies for the purpose of conscripting aliens now residing in the United States.

The second Liberty Loan of £600,000,000 will be launched on November 15.

JAPAN AND AMERICA.

The Washington correspondent of the "New York Times" telegraphs that the Japanese mission which has arrived in America expects to reach a fundamental understanding with America regarding her status in relation to the Pacific Islands seized from Germany, and now occupied by Japan.

ALLIES' CONFERENCE.

The conference of representatives of the Allies, which adjourned from Paris last week after considering Balkans affairs, is now proceeding at a south coast town. Mr. Lloyd George (Prime Minister), General Smuts, Mr. Bonar Law (Chancellor of the Exchequer), Lord Robert Cecil (Foreign Under-Secretary), Baron Sonnino (Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs), and the Russian representatives proceeded thither yesterday. The Prime Minister will return to-day.

POST-WAR PRODUCTION.

The House of Commons debated the appointment of the Minister for Reconstruction.

Mr. W. A. S. Hewins moved an amendment to prevent the Minister advising on the commercial, industrial, and agricultural policy. It was negatived by 89 votes to 64.

Sir George Cave, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, explained that the Government was solely responsible for the policy. The Minister's duty was to make early and valuable recommendations. The salary, £2000 per annum, was approved by 142 votes to 40.

Dr. C. Addison (Minister for Reconstruction), addressing representatives of the chemical industries, said they could only pay for the war by increasing post-war production. The Government had received much information as to Germany's preparations to increase production. Our position was in extreme danger owing to habits of muddle and drift. The Germans were better than us in scientific researches. Britain had established many industries since the war, which must not be allowed to pass over to German control. He, as Minister for Reconstruction, would not interfere with business, but would only seek to help solve inevitable problems. Therefore he sought the guidance of the manufacturers. It was necessary to give the workers a real interest in the introduction of improved methods of manufacture.

PRICE OF FOOD.

In the House of Lords Lord Kimberley said the farmers were dumbfounded at the prices fixed for beef, especially the prices after January next. Many have ploughed up turnips and put in wheat, preferring not to lose money by fattening cattle.

Lord Rhondda (Food Controller) admitted that the public were alarmed at the prospect of soaring prices. He proposed to fix a price to the retailer corresponding to the price paid by the army. Meat prices had been fixed after consultation with the Board of Agriculture. Any alteration in prices was not advisable, but he hoped shortly to effect a reduction in the cost of fodder.

Fifty thousand miners observed an idle day on the Lanarkshire coalfields. Mass meetings protested against the high price of food and called on the Government to take immediate action.

MR. HOLMAN.

LONDON, Aug. 2.

The Premier of New South Wales (Mr. Holman) conferred with General Smuts on the post-war problems of the Dominions. Mr. Holman will address munition workers at Sheffield on Sunday, under the auspices of the Workers' Patriotic Union. He will urge the maintenance of efforts to win the war.

SPANISH POLICY.

It is reported from Madrid that Senor Dato, the Premier, commenting on the attitude of certain Germanophile newspapers, said that the Government had decided to suppress any organ tending to compromise the international policy of Spain.

SOCIALIST PEACE EFFORTS.

STOCKHOLM CONFERENCE

INVITATION TO ALLIES.

LONDON, Aug. 2.

The controversy as to whether or not Britain, France, and America should be represented at the Socialist International Congress at Stockholm, which will consider peace propositions, and which the Russians are expected to attend, is arousing much interest.

There is much speculation as to the attitude the Labour Conference will adopt on August 10 upon the invitation to send delegates to Stockholm. Possibly there will be a close division. Preparations, however, are proceeding on the assumption that there will be a substantial majority in favour of acceptance.

The executive of the Labour party met in the House of Commons, and received a report from Mr. Arthur Henderson, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, and Mr. J. J. Wardle on the result of the conference in Paris.

The General Federation of Trade Unions has reaffirmed its decision not to attend a conference at which the delegates may meet enemy delegates until France and Belgium have been evacuated and reparation promised.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labour, has cabled that his organisation will not attend the Stockholm Conference. The federation considers the conference inopportune, and that it cannot be productive of good.

Mr. Appleton has replied that the British Federation of Trade Unions concurs in this view, and considers that conferences will be futile until the freedom of democracy is secured.

Answering several questions in the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law (leader of the House) emphasised the statement that no representative of the Government will attend the Stockholm Conference. Personally, he hoped that the Labour party would not approve of the conference. The Government had not yet decided whether it would allow anyone to attend. Probably, he added, no one would be allowed to attend.

POSITION IN FRANCE.

The French Chamber of Deputies expressed confidence in the Government by 396 votes to 76.

M. Ribot, the Premier, in a speech which preceded the vote of confidence, and replying to M. Renaudel's request that the Socialists be allowed to go to Stockholm, said: We wish for an honourable peace, not a peace which will make us slaves. Such a peace is only to be obtained by victory, and is not obtainable by conferences. We do not think that the Socialist Conference in Stockholm can give us the peace desired.

A Socialist named Mistral cried: We will go in spite of you.

Thereupon there was uproar and shouts of disapproval.

M. Ribot then appealed to the Chamber for unity, and the vote was taken.

At the instance of M. Klotz, the Chamber, by 292 votes to 61, reaffirmed the resolution embodying France's war aims adopted early in June. Thirty socialists voted with the Government.

[The French Chamber of Deputies, after holding a secret session, published on June 5 an Order of the Day, setting forth the expectations of France in relation to the war, as follows:—The liberation of the invaded territories. The return to France of the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, taken by Germany in 1871. A just reparation for any damage done, apart from any thought of conquest or the subjection of a foreign people. Only the socialists voted against the resolution. The voting was as follows:—For the Order, 463; against the Order, 55. There are about 600 members of the French Chamber of Deputies, and over 100 of that number belong to the Socialist party.]

Admiral Lacaze (French Minister for the Navy and a member of the War Council) resigned because the Naval Committee of the Chamber was seeking power to inquire into all matters pertaining to the navy. The Chamber will debate the proposal on Friday.

M. Denys Cochin has resigned his office as Under-Secretary for the Blockade.

GERMANY AND PEACE.

A London message says that a prominent trade union official states that Germany has taken unofficial steps to discover the peace terms of the Allies, and that peace is probable in October.

HOSPITAL SHIP ASHORE.

HALIFAX, Aug. 1.

A hospital ship from England, with 600 Canadians aboard, went ashore outside the harbour. The vessel is resting easy in a calm sea.

All the soldiers have been landed.

GENERAL WAR CABLES.

LONDON, Aug. 2.

It is reported from Paris that a German aeroplane bombed the German prisoners' camp in Amiens.

The Canadian Government has announced a plan for the purchase of the Canadian Northern Railway.

A Rome message says that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg has retired to his country estate, and is engaged in writing memoirs covering his seven years' occupancy of the German Chancellorship.

A conference will be held in Vienna on August 4 of the German and Austrian Food Controllers to decide upon the division of the Roumanian grain crops, which are described as satisfactory. Bulgaria and Turkey will not be represented at the conference.

Captain Mickle, of the Garrison Artillery, formerly of Melbourne, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

The King Edward's Hospital Fund has received an anonymous gift of £25,000.

It is reported from Copenhagen that the new Austrian Cabinet will include two Germans, one Southern Slav, one Ruthenian, and one Galician.

WAR NOTES.

WET WEATHER IN THE WEST.

At a late hour last night the news from the Western front showed no alteration of importance in the general position around Ypres. The miserable wet weather is still affecting operations, and is bound to cause delay in the progress of the offensive. This incessant rain to which Sir Douglas Haig refers must increase the difficulties and discomforts of the attackers. The work of consolidating their new positions, which is imperative if the ground won is to be held, must be most trying under the present damp conditions. The task under dry conditions is difficult enough in the shell-swept area, but when trenches fill with water almost before they can be completed the disheartening nature of the work can be realised. Behind these improvised defences lies the main belt of shell-scarred ground, which the rain converts into a sea of mud, and across this must come the supplies for the men who are beating off the repeated counter-attacks, by means of which the enemy hopes to regain portion of his lost positions. Under the circumstances we need hardly wonder at the faith which he displays in this system of counter-attacking. That it has not shown better results is due to the quality of the men who made the advance, and are now determined to hold the ground gained. Sir Douglas Haig shows that the counter-attacks are not decreasing in severity. While they gained one temporary advantage near the Ypres-Roulers railway, the enemy was soon deprived of it, and the fact that he has been unable to add to his slight gains of the previous day suggests that, despite mud and rain, the British are rapidly strengthening their new line.

LATE WAR NEWS.

TEUTON PEACE FEELERS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.

Mr. Polk says that the United States will ignore the Teuton peace feelers, which are designed to influence public opinion. America's reply will be redoubled war preparations.

BRITISH CABINET.

The London correspondent of the "New York Tribune" reports a prediction that Mr. A. J. Balfour (now Foreign Minister) will be Prime Minister within two months.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S PLANS.

The statement published this morning, and attributed to "a high military authority," constitutes an effective reply to the wordy German communique which appeared yesterday. Contrary to the suggestion contained in that communique, the authority in question states that Sir Douglas Haig's plans "were carried out to the fullest degree." This does not accord with the enemy's claim that the aim of the British was a lofty one, and that it provided for the breaking of the German line and the annihilation of the U-boat pest. On the other hand, the military authority states that "the objectives were fixed according to the artillery's capacity, and the troops everywhere reached the prearranged line." This is the view which we should expect anyone conversant with the true condition of affairs on the Western front to take of the offensive as revealed by Sir Douglas Haig's reports. The enemy also realises perfectly well that the main task with which the Allies are faced is the destruction of the armies opposed to them. This is not to be achieved by a single concentrated attack, but, if it can be achieved, it will be as the result of a succession of attacks, and will probably be due as much to the Somme, Arras, Messines, Aisne, and other offensives as it will be to attacks which have still to be made in the future. As the military authority says, the Allied guns will soon be again hammering the enemy, and as long as that hammering leads to the attainment of fixed objectives at reasonably slight expense there need be no doubts as to the satisfactory working of the Allied plan.

LOW-ALTITUDE FLYING.

The cablegrams this morning give some interesting particulars of the remarkable results achieved by aeroplanes indulging in the fascinating but risky task of low-altitude flying. It may be thought that the correspondents who state that the airmen engaged in the fighting from elevations of 200ft and less are not adhering strictly to the truth. This performance is not only possible, but it is also highly probable. There are, of course, disadvantages as well as advantages in low-altitude flying. One of the evident disadvantages is the fact that anything up to 200ft is almost point blank range, and the airman who swoops along at this elevation must expect to be fired at by the very troops on whom he is turning his own machine-gun. In low-altitude flying, however, the aeroplane is not such an easy target as it would appear to be. Flying at a medium or high altitude it is easily discernible against the blue of the sky, and preparations can be made to give it a warm reception before it can make its presence felt. It is not such an easy matter picking out a machine when it is backed by a hill, especially if, as is now the case, the machine has been given a protective colouring. A machine approaching at a low altitude, therefore, is less likely to be seen when below the skyline, and may take the enemy by surprise. Dealing with this subject in his book, "Aircraft in Warfare," Mr. F. W. Lanchester says:—"Briefly, the immediate suggestion is that if low-altitude flying is systematically to be undertaken it should be conducted quite low—dangerously low, according to ordinary standards. At an altitude of 500ft an aeroplane still makes a very clear mark against the sky, visible from a considerable distance. By following the contour of the ground, never rising more than 100ft or 200ft, unless to clear an obstacle not otherwise to be avoided, an attack will be made with comparative suddenness, and the machine will be gone out of sight almost before there has been time to bring a gun to bear. Even when under fire it will have a certain tactical advantage in the fact that it will be attacking a line parallel to which it is flying—it need never miss its target—whereas it itself offers the worst kind of mark to the enemy, combining small size, high speed, disconcertingly short range, in addition to which it is, in effect, a disappearing target." The question of providing armour for protection against rifle fire is one which is closely related to low-altitude flying, and we may rest assured that it has not been overlooked.

BRUSSILOFF AND KORNILOFF.

The regrets expressed by the London newspapers regarding General Brussiloff's resignation will no doubt be shared throughout the Allied countries. These frequent changes in the Russian Higher Command are not likely to instil confidence in the minds of the people in Allied countries regarding Russia's military prospects. Even the appointment of General Korniloff as Commander-in-Chief hardly makes up for the loss of the Russian general with whose name is associated one of the most thorough and successful offensive efforts of which Russia has been capable during the present war. The reason for his resignation is not stated, and his expressed determination to support the revolution at all costs would suggest that he was above suspicion in this respect. His attitude in the past was one of suspicion regarding the old regime, and during his offensive last year he frequently evinced distrust of the authorities in Petrograd. His ability as a soldier and a strategist is unquestionable, and as he is not over 65 years of age it might have been expected that he would still play a prominent part in the regeneration of Russia. It is possible that the political considerations which influenced Russia's military action recently, combined with the subsequent collapse in Galicia, have something to do with his decision to resign. General Korniloff, his successor, is a man of very wide experience, and is credited with possessing remarkable popularity amongst the Russian soldiers. He has tasted the sweets of success, and has known the difficulties of retreat, and in both circumstances has proved himself an efficient and resourceful leader. His recent offensive on the southern side of the Dniester was an example of the effective work which the Russian soldier is still capable of when directed by one in whom he can place implicit trust. Unfortunately, it proved to be of no avail on account of the refusal of troops to the north to hold their ground. Whether he will be able to command from Russia's vast armies the respect and confidence which was accorded him by the 48th Division in the early days of the war, and later on, his army in Galicia, is a problem which the future alone will solve.

BARRIER NIGHT SHIFT DISPUTE.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

In response to a requisition a special general meeting of the A.M.A. has been called for Sunday afternoon to reconsider the decision of the A.M.A. to abolish the night shift on mines. The secretary (Mr. Barnett) states that the meeting was decided on before the A.M.A. had received the reply from the Mining Managers' Association refusing a conference on the question.

The Trades and Labour Council has decided that its members must take no part in stop-work meetings called on the mines.

STRIKE EXTENDS

RAILWAY FUELMEN DOWN SHOVELS

WILL THE TRAINS STOP?

DEFENCE COMMITTEE'S PROPOSALS

Although the actual number of the men who joined the railway and tramway strikers yesterday was inconsiderable, their addition to the ranks renders the position much more serious.

About 200 additional men downed tools, including the railway fuelmen (who load the engines with coal at Eveleigh), the moulders at Randwick and Eveleigh, and a few crane drivers.

The entrance of the fuelmen into the struggle opens up very grave considerations. Yesterday a few engines were coaled by some departmental clerks. The enginedrivers and firemen at once objected to running engines so loaded with what they call "black coal." There were ugly rumours of the drivers and firemen coming out and laying up the whole railway service, but this has been avoided so far.

Both train and tram services have been drastically restricted for to-morrow (Sunday). There will be no trams at all before 1 p.m. or after 9 p.m.

A Defence Committee, consisting of representatives of the various unions concerned has been appointed. This committee has decided to ask the Government to insist upon the Commissioners withdrawing the card system, and then to appoint a Royal Commission to enquire into it.

The Acting Premier stated last night that there was no change in the attitude of the Government, who were still awaiting a reply to their invitation to the men to confer.

Meetings of the city tramway traffic men (drivers and conductors) were held yesterday. It was stated that the strike was not discussed. The meetings, however, carried resolutions of protest against the employment of special constables in the service, whose work, they say, is to spy on the tramway men.

City trams were run all day and night yesterday on what is known as the "series" schedule. That means a one-third reduction in the speed throughout the journey, and a corresponding diminution of the number of cars used in the service. There would appear every prospect of the tram services being maintained to-day.

ENGINEDRIVERS.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The most serious aspect of the strike was created by the fuelmen engaged at the Sydney central depots ceasing work yesterday afternoon. These employees were engaged in shovelling coal on to the stages from which the locomotives are supplied. There is now a grave danger of the trouble spreading to the engine-drivers and firemen engaged on the New South Wales railways.

Mr. Ainsworth, secretary to the Locomotive Engine-drivers, Firemen's, and Cleaners' Association, interviewed last night, said:—"An impossible position has arisen. Clerks have been placed on the coal stages in place of the fuelmen who ceased work. In consequence of that a number of the engine men refused to take the locomotives out. These men considered that the coal was "black," as it had been handled by non-unionists. As I said before, the position is becoming impossible, and we will have to take our stand. The executive is considering the matter, and a mass meeting of the members of the union has been convened for to-morrow afternoon, when the men will come to a decision.

"There are engines that have been coaled by union labour, and we are still running engines which have been coaled in that fashion. So far the union has not arrived at any decision on the question. A number of the individual members have declared certain coal "black," and refused to work, and there is a likelihood of the other members also ceasing work. It is understood that a number of trains will be running to-morrow, but after then I doubt whether there will be sufficient coal on the engines to permit of their being run."

THE MOULDERS OUT.

"A MATTER OF UNION PRINCIPLE."

The strike yesterday extended to the brass-moulders, and it is officially stated that, taking both the Eveleigh and Randwick workshops, 160 of them are now out. The Moulders' Union has a membership throughout the State of about 950, so it will be seen that only a small percentage of that number are affected. Of the small staff of moulders at Randwick only one remained at work. The others employed there either did not turn up at all or went to work and afterwards left. On this point statements from the workshops and from the union are contradictory. The secretary of the union (Mr. Bathgate) says that, so far as he knows, the men—eight in all—turned up and one remained at work. There are now only about 60 men at work at Randwick.

"Our men are out," adds Mr. Bathgate, "simply on a matter of union principle. Our attitude, so far as the dispute is concerned, is unchanged. If our men could have remained at work without infringing on the work of other men they would have done so. In this connection representations were made to the management, but if they had accepted the proposals put to them it would have meant a violation of the first principles of trade unionism. This they were not prepared to do, and as a result they are out of work. So far as the card system is concerned, we have never discussed it. When we have a grievance then we will deal with it."

OFFERS OF HELP.

COMMISSIONERS' REPORT.

CAUSE FOR SATISFACTION.

The following report was made on the general situation by the Chief Commissioner yesterday:—

"The position with regard to the strike has not materially altered since yesterday. The tramway services are in a reasonably satisfactory position, the full requirements of the business section of the community being met by the trams provided for their use this morning, and the railway services are running as usual.

"A very large section of the railway and tramway employees is standing loyal to the administration, and the Commissioners have every reason to hope that the same loyal attitude will be maintained, however long the trouble may last, especially as there are the strongest grounds for believing that even amongst those men who have been called out from their employment the majority were against the drastic action which has been taken by the union leaders.

"The employees in the Randwick workshops who left were quiet in their demeanour, leaving everything at the workshops in perfectly good order; and both they and the employees at Eveleigh who ceased work gave no indication of any kind that they were leaving wholly of their own free will.

"There is cause for satisfaction so far as the administration is concerned in the many expressions of sympathy extended to them by sections of the public in the attitude they have taken up in this matter, and cause for greater gratification still in the many offers made to provide assistance in carrying on the railway and tramway services should such assistance be necessary. Skilled mechanics in the electrical trades have offered their services, as have also other classes of mechanics. The University students in the engineering classes have volunteered their services in a body to assist in any way in which they could be most suitably employed. Other offers of value have also been made."

THE TRAINS.

ADEQUATE SERVICE TO-DAY.

MR. FRASER'S STATEMENT.

When seen at a late hour last night, Mr. Fraser (Chief Commissioner), who had just returned from the Eveleigh workshops, stated that arrangements had been made which would enable the reduced passenger service decided upon on Thursday to be run to-day.

"There was a little trouble this afternoon," said Mr. Fraser, "on account of the fact that the coal on some of the suburban engines had been loaded by labour which was not union labour, although it was departmental labour. The drivers stated they would take the people home to-night (Friday), but would not use that class of coal on Saturday. There was an agreement with the drivers and firemen that they would use engines which had been coaled with union labour. I am now able to say we shall have sufficient engines properly loaded, according to the views of the engine-drivers and firemen, to run the trains on Saturday."

"What about the service on Sunday?" the Chief Commissioner was asked.

Mr. Fraser replied that there would be such a restricted service on Sunday—only a few trains—that it was not likely any difficulty would be experienced.

In reply to a question as to whether the ordinary service was run last night (Friday), Mr. Fraser said. "Yes, although it is possible that there was a little disorganisation."

"Of course, you are unable to give any idea of what the position will be on Monday?"

"No," replied Mr. Fraser, "I can only speak with any certainty about Saturday and Sunday. According to the information I have at the present moment, we shall be able to give the public a train service on Saturday. Arrangements have been completed to do that."

Questioned about the long distance trains, the Chief Commissioner said all the country trains got away to-night (Friday), and the up trains will come in on Saturday morning.

Mr. Fraser added that all the fuel men at Eveleigh had gone out. He concluded by mentioning that during the day a number of men who were handling ashes decided to cease work. They went out, but were promptly ordered back by the union.

CRANEDRIVERS' POSITION.

According to the secretary of the Federated Engine-drivers and Firemen's Union, the crane-drivers in the Eveleigh foundry—they number only about four in that particular shop—were suspended yesterday afternoon for having refused to lift material which had been handled by men taking the place of the strikers.

RAIL AND TRAM SERVICES

SERIOUS RESTRICTIONS.

NO SUNDAY MORNING TRAMS.

On and from to-morrow (Sunday), the Railway Commissioners have decided to restrict both the railway and tramway services considerably. With few exceptions new and extraordinary time-tables will be put in force, similar to those which were adopted during the critical days of the last coal strike.

On Sunday next the train services on the suburban railway lines will be as follows:—

Sydney to Homebush, calling at all stations, 9.30 a.m., 12.40, 5.30, and 8.50 p.m.

Sydney to Parramatta, calling at Redfern, Strathfield, and beyond only, 9.55 a.m., 1 p.m., 5.55, and 9.10 p.m., with corresponding trains to Sydney.

Hornsby to Strathfield.—Trains will leave Hornsby for Strathfield at 9.22 a.m., 12.32, 5.32, and 8.42 p.m., with corresponding trains from Strathfield to Hornsby.

Milson's Point Line.—Hornsby to Milson's Point, 9.40 a.m., 12 noon, 5.55, and 8.35 p.m. From Milson's Point, 10.32 a.m. and 12.57, 6.55, and 9.25 p.m.

Illawarra Line.—Sydney to Oatley, calling at all stations, 10.17 a.m., 1.30, 6.30, and 9.45 p.m., with corresponding trains to Sydney. Sydney to Bankstown, calling at all stations, 10.30 a.m., 1.35, 6.30, and 9.50 p.m., with corresponding trains to Sydney.

There will be no trams on any lines before 1 p.m., nor after 9 p.m. The Cronulla service will be dispensed with altogether on Sunday.

On and from Monday next, suburban railway services in the evening (after 7 o'clock) will be the same as during the coal strike in November last.

Trains will leave Sydney, stopping at all stations to Parramatta, at 7.5, 8.5, 9.5, 10.5, and 11.5 p.m., and on the Illawarra and Milson's Point lines somewhat similar hourly services after 7 p.m. will be given, of which particulars are advertised.

The Railway Commissioners also notify that from Monday next, and until further notice, goods traffic will not be accepted for despatch from Darling Island. Any goods permitted to be forwarded by rail under the restricted conditions now in operation will be received at Darling Harbour.

The strike has not so far affected the running of the trams beyond the fact that they have been running at below the normal speed. Inquiries made late last night elicited the information that the all-night trams would run as usual.

GOODS TRAFFIC RESTRICTIONS.

A notice is being exhibited at all goods receiving stations, sidings, etc., throughout the railway system, intimating that consequent on the prevailing conditions, intending con-

Shippers of goods traffic must clearly understand that a guarantee cannot be given as to when consignments tendered and accepted for transit by goods train will be despatched, or that when despatched uninterrupted transit will be given.

GOVERNMENT STILL WAITING.

There was another meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, and all the Ministers, with the exception of Mr. Beeby, Minister for Labour and Industry, who is in Melbourne, were constantly on hand all day, in case further consultations were necessary. As far as the Government is concerned, however, there were no "strike developments" yesterday. The offer of the Government to meet representatives of the strikers in conference with the Chief Commissioner for Railways, and the leader of the Opposition, Mr. John Storey, is still awaiting acceptance by the men. The Acting Premier, Mr. Fuller, stated last night that no evidence had been given by any representatives of the strikers of a desire to confer. The offer was still open.

Referring to the statements made by the president of the Engineers' Society and the secretary of the Labour Council, that they had no reason to believe that they were invited to meet the Acting Premier on Wednesday night, Mr. Fuller said he had personally written the words "to-night" in red ink on the typewritten copies of the statement he proposed to make in Parliament that afternoon before they were despatched to Mr. Padgen and Mr. Kavanagh.

During the course of his reply to a deputation of carcase butchers and stock owners about the Homebush Abattoirs yesterday afternoon, Mr. Fuller, referring to some statements made by the deputationists, said: "I am very glad to hear you say that you are behind the Government in the stand it has taken on the present strike. The Government is convinced that a number of irresponsible men, who have come here recently, and who have taken possession of our trades-unions, are attempting not only to boss the unions, but to rule the country. We do not think they should be allowed to do this, and for that reason we have taken a definite stand against them."

It has been further pointed out that on Wednesday night for some considerable time Mr. Padgen, president of the Amalgamated Engineers, was present in one of the lobbies of Parliament House in consultation with Mr. John Storey, leader of the Opposition. It is known that while Mr. Padgen waited Mr. Storey saw the Acting Premier, and returned to the engineers' president with a confirmation of the invitation to a conference to discuss the whole matter.

SOUTHERN TRAIN SERVICES.

ALBURY, Friday.

The local railway stationmaster has been advised that in consequence of the strike by the railway workshop employees in Sydney, that important alterations, starting from Monday next, will be brought into effect in regard to interstate and branch train services. There will be no alteration in regard to the Albury-Sydney mail train. The service known as the paper train from Sydney, which arrives here daily at 10.35 p.m., will after this week run only on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, arriving five hours earlier. Other services terminating here will be cut down by half. The Holbrook and Corowa services, now tri-weekly, are to be reduced to twice weekly. The Rock-Oaklands service has been cut down to three trains a week to Lockhart, and twice a week to Oaklands. The Cootamundra-Tumut and Cootamundra-Wyalong mixed service is to be reduced to thrice weekly, likewise on the Hay-Tocumwal line.

RAILWAY AND TRAMWAY ASSOCIATION.

The executive of the Government Railway and Tramway Service Association met last night, but the proceedings were veiled in secrecy. The executive will meet again to-day. In announcing this, the secretary of the association (Mr. Claude Thompson) said that the men also would probably hold a meeting, but beyond that he could say nothing.

STRIKERS OUT OF COURT.

Mr. Justice Heydon refused to allow the representative of one of the striking unions to appear in a case before the Industrial Court yesterday.

In an application for leave to appeal against the award of a wages board, Mr. Claude Thompson announced that he appeared for the Amalgamated Railway and Tramway Service Association.

His Honor: Your men are on strike, are they not?

Mr. Thompson replied that he did not see why he should be asked to make any admissions without notice.

His Honor: I have a perfect right to ask such a question when an application is made for leave to appeal against an award. I am not going to hear the representative of a body of men who are out on strike.

Consent was refused as regards the union in question, and Mr. Thompson left the court.

TRAMWAY EMPLOYEES.

The opinion was expressed by a number of union officials yesterday that there was not much likelihood of the tramway drivers and conductors joining in the strike. A mass meeting of the drivers and conductors, members of the Tramway Union, was held yesterday morning, not to discuss the "card-system" introduced into the workshops, but to consider another grievance. The meeting was called in response to a petition to the executive to deal with the espionage system employed by the department. The employees alleged that the system in vogue at the present time was open to the gravest abuse, and they considered that the time had arrived when the union should take serious steps to protect its members. The following motion was carried almost unanimously:—"That this meeting enters an emphatic protest against the continuance of the system of employing probationary constables, or any other persons not employees of the Tramway Department, as special constables, and requests the executive to take such action as they deem to be necessary towards bringing about its discontinuance." A report was given to the meeting with regard to the steps taken in connection with the Randwick dispute. No discussion was allowed on this question, the chairman pointing out that the meeting had only been convened for a specific purpose.

ULTIMO POWER-HOUSE.

It is not feared that the trouble will spread to the Ultimo Power-house. The members of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, who appear to be the prime movers in the strike, have very few of their number employed there. The steam engines which drive the generating machinery are in charge of the marine engineers, and the employees who attend to the generating plant and switching are members of the Electrical Trades Union. The men employed in the sub-stations are all members of the Electrical Trades Union.

ELECTRICAL TRADES UNION.

A mass meeting of the members of the Electrical Trades Union was held at the Trades Hall last night. At the conclusion of proceedings one of the officials stated that the members of the union employed at the Ultimo power-house would not be called out. However, the meeting decided to leave the matter in the hands of the executive.

A RAILWAYMAN'S ALLEGATIONS.

A railway official, speaking to our Parramatta representative, made the following startling statement:—"All this trouble is because of a system being introduced which asks that men shall account for their time. What does it matter so long as you honestly do your work? I have to account for my time in the branch that I am in and I find no fault with it. This strike is a serious thing, and it is going to affect the innocent man." Pointing to Clyde repairing yards, the official continued: "There are many loafers over there, whose only concern is to sign on and off, and when they have signed on that is the last you see of them till they sign off. They get in among the dead engines playing cards, and boast about it. I go past there pretty often, and I have seen it. What matters a card to an honest man? It is the loafer and the growler that it will affect. He don't like it. When I see a growler that's the man I watch." The official was a perfect stranger, and he remarked in conclusion, "I don't know your opinion on the matter, but that is mine."

DEFENCE COMMITTEE.

SUGGESTS ROYAL COMMISSION.

The defence committee appointed by the meeting of delegates from the unions directly and indirectly affected by the strike proposes to forward to the Government this morning the following proposals as a basis of settlement:—

1. That the Railway Commissioners revert to the position as it existed on June 1.
2. That the Government appoint a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the subject matter of the trouble, consisting of representatives of the unions and of the Railway Commissioners.
3. That the men return to work upon the granting of this.

Referring last night to these proposals, the secretary of the Labour Council (Mr. E. J. Kavanagh, M.L.C.), as the defence committee's press representative, stated: "We give the Railway Commissioners credit for believing the card system to be a good one, but as far as we know they have had no practical experience of it. Their ideas in regard to it must, therefore, necessarily be based upon theory. The Commissioners have asserted that the system will not inflict any great hardship upon the workers. The workers, on the other hand, believe that it will. They hold the opinion that it will not only be a matter of men working to an ordinary time sheet, whereby the time of any job may be properly and effectively recorded, but that they will actually be working to the watch, with the sub-foreman with his watch in his hand, to say 'Go!' and to check a man's time, still with the watch in hand, at the close of a job. This, figuratively, is the impression of the system, and the men feel that it will be an irritating one for anyone to work under.

"These ideas of the system may be wrong, and we are therefore now suggesting the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the whole matter. Both sides can place their views before that tribunal, and the Commission, apart from saying which side is right or wrong, may be able to evolve some practical scheme that will be acceptable to the men and that will give the Railway Commissioners all that they say they desire, i.e., a method whereby they can ascertain the cost of work on various jobs and the time occupied by the men. By reverting, as suggested, to the position as it existed on June 1, we would begin de novo. By these proposals we are not asking the Railway Commissioners to sacrifice any dignity or prestige.

"We feel that on both sides there is a certain amount of misunderstanding regarding the system, and that only an inquiry such as is suggested can clear matters. If the Commission is appointed the men are prepared to resume work. If the Government is as sincere as I believe it is in regard to the convenience of the public and the welfare of the community, it will accept these proposals."

Questioned as to what might be the position if the Government rejected the proposals, Mr. Kavanagh said:—"It is impossible to say what might happen. In my 24 years' experience of trades unionism I have never seen men more unanimous than on this question. The suggestion that the I.W.W. or extreme Socialists are connected with the trouble is an entire mistake. We are prepared to meet the Government in conference straight away to deal with the proposals to which I have referred."

Mr. Kavanagh was questioned as to his personal view of the possible extension of the strike. "There is," he said, "every possibility of its extension right throughout the whole of the railway and tramway services, and that may, of course, affect every private employment to a very serious extent. So far as its extension to private workshops is concerned, this is possible only in an indirect way."

UNWILLING STRIKERS.

Evidence is accumulating that among many of the unionists affected particularly among the more responsible men with dependents the strike was not wanted. Some of the men from Randwick who are now out openly stated to departmental officers the day before the strike that they did not want to leave their work over the dispute.

A pathetic letter written to the Tramway Department a few days before the strike, but only received on Thursday, throws a light on perhaps the most pitiful aspect of the unfortunate struggle. A woman wrote, unknown to her husband, asking if the authorities would not take into consideration his work and long service, and make him a foreman, so that he would not have to go on strike. As a member of the union he would have to strike if the others did, although he was satisfied with his work, and had no fault to find with the card system, she said. The wife who wrote was an invalid with a large family, and the strike meant actual want within a week or two. What she feared has happened: her husband is now on strike with his fellow unionists. There are doubtless many similarly situated husbands who come out because the union says so, against their wills, and wives and children who must suffer.

FERRY SERVICES AFFECTED.

Representatives of the Sydney Ferries, Ltd., have been in consultation with the tramway authorities, and have come to an arrangement to fit in, as far as circumstances will allow, the ferry services with the tram time-tables, consequent upon the altered conditions as affecting the trams.

"Our idea," said the manager of the ferries (Mr. M'Kenzie), yesterday, "is to wait for the trams for a reasonable time, but to wait for any length of time would only serve to dislocate our own service, and make confusion worse confounded. I cannot say that the ferry service has so far been disorganised to any serious extent. The public can rest assured that we will endeavour to save them as much inconvenience as possible."

Questioned as to holiday traffic on Monday, Mr. M'Kenzie said the usual services would be run.

LITHGOW WORKSHOPS.

LITHGOW, Friday.

The workshops strike has reached Lithgow. At Eskbank locomotive sheds about seven fitters are affected, and they ceased work to-day at 1.30. All railway employees members of the A.S.E. throughout the western district will cease work during the afternoon.

MR. J. STOREY'S ERROR.

THE POLICE DRILL.

The error into which Mr. J. Storey fell, when he stated or inferred in Parliament that the police were being drilled to deal with strikers, is explained in the following report by the Inspector-General of Police (Mr. Mitchell) to the Acting Premier (Mr. Fuller):—

"Regarding the statement that police are being drilled by the military authorities, and perfected in the use of firearms, I beg to report that no person connected directly or indirectly with the military authorities is now, or ever has been, employed as a drill instructor by the Police Department. For over 30 years the practice has been for all uniform men in the metropolitan district to undergo a short course of drill, as provided for in the police regulations.

"The course usually consists of four attendances per annum, and is confined to squad drill, rifle exercise, and revolver practice. Drill is carried out during the winter months at the Police Depot, Bourke-street, Redfern. The instructor is Sergeant First-class James Fraser, who has acted in that capacity for many years, and is a thoroughly competent instructor.

"It may be mentioned that the drill for the current year is practically completed, except in isolated cases, where men happened to be on leave, or otherwise specially engaged, and unable to attend on the dates originally fixed."

POSITION AT NEWCASTLE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

It is stated that as far as can be seen there will be no curtailment of the trains engaged in the coal trade for at least one week.

APPRENTICES STRIKE.

The thirty apprentices who held a meeting and passed a motion at the Honeysuckle workshop yesterday, to the effect that they would continue working during the strike, were sent to Hamilton and Port Waratah works this morning. They got the engines at Hamilton ready for the mail trains to-night, but at the luncheon hour they held a meeting and decided to strike. They left without doing any further work. An official who was proud of the loyal stand the boys had taken yesterday attributed their action to-day to either promises or threats made by some of the men who had struck yesterday.

The boilermakers and ironworkers' assistants came out on strike to-day, and brought the total number of strikers to nearly 450.

At Honeysuckle workshops, in place of over 440 men working to-day, there were only 40. About 80 men from Port Waratah and Hamilton workshops and 20 from the tramway sheds at Parnell-place were also on strike.

Before the boilermakers left their work they straightened up the shop and left everything tidy. Some of them expressed regret that they were compelled to strike. Several engineers when leaving work yesterday also expressed their regret at having to take such a course.

The tram and train services that were adopted during the last coal strike are to be brought into operation on and after Sunday next, and no special trams will be running to the racecourse to-morrow. This will not cause much inconvenience, as the Broadmeadow tram stop is not far from the course.

POSITION IN VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It was stated to-day by the Victorian Railways Commissioners that there is a stock of 105,000 tons of coal at Wodonga, about two months' supply, and that from 16,000 to 20,000 tons of coal a week is obtained from Wonthaggi. The Commissioners do not anticipate that the strike will last two months. Should the strike be confined to the mechanics and fitters, it will be a question of how long the engines can be kept running without mechanical attention. In view of the statement of officials of the Victorian Railways Union that the Victorian railway employees would decline to co-operate with free labourers who might be engaged to take the places of the strikers, the third Railways Commissioner, Mr. E. B. Jones, was asked whether the Victorian authorities would make an effort to assist the New South Wales authorities to maintain the interstate services. Mr. Jones replied that the Commissioners would await developments. They would do all in their power to keep the railways working in this State.

The "card system," the introduction of which is given as the cause of the strike, is not an innovation. The system has been in operation in many establishments in Melbourne for some time. About a year ago it was introduced at the Victoria Barracks. Employees in Victoria have not openly opposed it, but many do not approve of the system, because they regard it as an American idea of speeding up.

UNLAWFUL ASSOCIATIONS ACT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

On the motion for the adjournment of the House of Representatives, Mr. Fenton (Vic.) asked whether it was a fact that the railway associations or other associations connected with the strike trouble in New South Wales were to be brought under the provisions of the Unlawful Associations Act, and whether telegrams between these associations and associations in Victoria were being held up.

The Minister for Works and Railways, Mr. Watt, said he would communicate the question to the Prime Minister, and ask him to advise Mr. Fenton to-morrow.

MR. BEEBY IN MELBOURNE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Labour in New South Wales, Mr. Beeby, arrived in Melbourne to-day, and conferred with the Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, regarding the position in Sydney. At the conclusion of the conference, Mr. Hughes said that Mr. Beeby had made no representations to him with regard to any action by the Commonwealth; no arrangement was made for a further conference; but, if the position developed so that it necessitated Federal action, no doubt Mr. Beeby, who returns to Sydney to-morrow, would see him again.

POSITION OF SOUTHERN COLLIERIES.

BULLI, Friday.

The Coledale Colliery, which was rendered idle yesterday because, in the opinion of the men, and particularly the wheelers, there was a possibility of the workmen's train back being cancelled, owing to the railway trouble, resumed work this morning. If the train which conveys the miners to work daily is cancelled by the Commissioners, the Coalcliff, South Clifton, Scarborough Tunnel, and Coledale collieries will be unable to continue working, as the principal labour employed at these mines is supplied by workmen from the southern end of the district.

THE MAILS.

The Postal authorities notify, in connection with the curtailed train arrangements to come into force to-day and to-morrow, the following alterations in the closing of the principal mails affected:—

NORTH.—Mails for northern places in this State now closing at 4 p.m., and for Brisbane, Queensland, and foreign places forwarded via Brisbane, will close at 1.30 p.m.; late fee 1.45 p.m. Letters for Brisbane and Brisbane suburbs may also be posted in the special box at the G.P.O. from 1.30 to 1.45 p.m. All mails for the north-western line beyond Werris Creek will close at 1.30 p.m.

South.—Mails for Melbourne and other States forwarded via Melbourne will close at 5 p.m.; late fee 5 p.m. to 5.15 p.m. Letters may also be posted in the special box at the G.P.O. without late fee up to 5.15 p.m. Southern States, 5 p.m. to 5.30 p.m.; Adelaide only, Melbourne only, 5.30 p.m. to 5.45 p.m.

West.—Mails for places beyond Orange, also for Mudgee line, closing at [illegible] p.m. [illegible]

Late fee box, railway station.—For Brisbane, Queensland, and New South Wales northern towns, 3.30 p.m. and between 3.30 and 4 p.m. in the mail van attached to the 4 p.m. train. For Melbourne, southern States, United Kingdom, etc., 6.45 p.m. and also between 6.45 and 7.25 p.m., in the late fee box attached to the guard's van on the 7.25 p.m. train. Newspapers, papers, and registered articles for inland and interstate will be accepted one hour before the time for closing the ordinary mails.

BATHURST, Friday.

The strike has extended to Bathurst. The engineers came out at 10 a.m., the carriage and waggon builders at 10.30, and the boilermakers and blacksmiths at noon to-day, and only the heads of departments and labourers remain at work. About 40 men left off work at the loco. works, and at about 2.30 p.m. the men formed a queue at the principal pay office and presented their dockets for payment. All the officers, apprentices, and labourers are still at work. The engine drivers and firemen are not yet affected, and the opinion is that they will continue their work. Passenger traffic will continue as usual until Sunday night, and then there will be only one mail train and one passenger train each way and two goods trains each day.

SHIPBUILDING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Additional replies from the unions with regard to the Federal Ministry's proposals for the establishment of the Shipbuilding industry were received to-day by the Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers rejected piecework and the dilution of labour in all the States; the Blacksmith's Society of South Australia accepted all the proposals; the Ironmoulders of New South Wales and Victoria, and the Amalgamated Timber Workers of Victoria rejected piecework; while in South Australia the same union adopted the proposals. Speaking of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, Mr. Hughes said that it seemed that, although there was a majority against the proposals as a whole, one State, at least, was in favour of them.

PROMOTIONS.

Mr. J. Ross Cuthbert, son of Captain J. Cuthbert, Lindfield, has been granted a commission in the Royal Navy as engineer sub-lieutenant. Captain Noel M. Cuthbert, a younger brother, now on the Western front, has been mentioned in despatches by General Sir Douglas Haig.

R. A. Money, son of Mrs. Angel Money, has received a commission, and is now in France.

W. A. Tebbutt, of Roseville, who was at the landing on Gallipoli, and has been at the war continuously since, has been promoted to lieutenant in France. His cousin, Colonel A. H. Tebbutt, of the A.M.C., has recently been awarded the D.S.O.

CONCORD VOLUNTARY WORKERS.

At a meeting of the newly-formed Concord branch of the Voluntary Workers' Association, the Mayor (Alderman T. C. Corrie) presiding, Aldermen Gettens and Mr. Foxcroft offered to lend £100 each to enable a start to be made. It was reported that the amount in hand was about £61. Mr. Gould M'Dougall offered his services as hon. solicitor to the association, Mr. Chapman hon. surveyor. Mr. Ponton promised to supply the first 1000 bricks, and plasterers and electricians offered their services. Mr. Foxcroft agreed to put in the foundation of the first brick cottage, and Mr. and Mrs. Lemon (Stanmore) and Mr. C. L. Cameron promised furniture. Mr. J. Dunkley gave a block of land.

BROKEN HILL RAINFALL.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

The rainfall at Broken Hill on Wednesday night and Thursday totalled 58 points. Some of the district stations report over 2in. The fall in Broken Hill yesterday flooded the streets, and seriously dislocated the traffic.

THE RED TRIANGLE.

FINAL MEETING AT TOWN HALL.

There was a general meeting of the committee and others interested in "Red Triangle Day" in the Town Hall vestibule yesterday afternoon for the purpose of receiving the financial statement and the reports relating to the recent collection of funds throughout the State. Mr. G. Mason Allard, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, presided, and the gathering included the Lord Mayor (Alderman R. D. Meagher, M.L.C.), Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C. (hon. treasurer), Mr. W. Gillanders (general secretary), Mr. H. A. Wheeler (national secretary), Mr. W. G. Crane (president of the Y.M.C.A.), Mr. W. T. Macpherson, Mr. W. E. K. Satchell, Mr. H. A. Sinclair (hon. secretary of the suburban and country organisation), Mr. Orwell Phillips, and the organising secretary, Mr. C. H. Dew.

The financial statement, as presented by Mr. Meeks, showed that the total to date received from the "Red Triangle Day" collection was £159,037 2s 5d, made up as follows:—Collections from city stalls, sections, etc., £17,200; suburban centres, £22,446 12s 4d; country centres, £75,662 13s 11d; direct donations from suburbs and country, £8727 16s 2d; donations from city, £35,000. Of the country centres, Mr. Meeks stated, Armidale headed the list with £3850. The mention of this fact was greeted with loud applause, which was renewed when Mr. Meeks stated that Wellington had contributed the next largest amount, viz., £2580; West Maitland was third with £2500.

The report of Mr. Harry J. Cohen, who worked for six weeks in the interests of the fund, stated that the whole of the buttons issued were valued at about £10,600—98,000 at 1s, 9,200 at 5s, and 3,400 at £1. The amounts collected from stall-holders, section-holders, roving cars, minstrel troupes, etc., aggregated about £17,200. The following buttons were issued throughout the State:—95,000 scholar buttons at 3d, 400,000 buttons at 1s, 24,000 at 5s each, and 11,500 at £1 each. "I do not think the splendid achievement in the metropolis," Mr. Cohen added in his report, "has ever been approached by any previous button day."

Mr. Sinclair, in his report, stated that the amount in hand from the suburbs was £22,062, and from the country £76,000, and the further notification of £12,000 from districts that have not yet been able to close the fund gave a grand total of £116,000 from his department. The cost of collecting this sum, as far as his department was concerned, inclusive of salaries, postage, and carriage of buttons, was less than £140. Mr. Sinclair took special pride in what he termed "his baby"—the scholar button. "I have yet to be convinced," he said, "that she did not prove one of the best advertisements Red Triangle Day had, and it gives me much pleasure publicly to state my sincere appreciation, both to teachers and scholars, of their efforts." Thanks were due to one and all who helped, and he specially mentioned the Red Cross Society, which threw the weight of its organisation into the movement.

In moving the adoption of the reports and financial statement, Mr. Allard said that whilst the magnificent sum of £160,000 had been raised, the expenses of the central committee were under 1 per cent. (Applause.) The response that had been made to the appeal by the public was a splendid tribute to the war work of the Y.M.C.A. The objective aimed at was £50,000, and it had been subscribed more than threefold. Of the sum raised 75 per cent. would go to the National Army and Navy Department of the Y.M.C.A., and the balance of 25 per cent. would be retained for work amongst the soldiers in Australia. He specially thanked the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, the officers of the Commercial Bank, Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Cohen, and others, who had given so much interest to the fund. "It is a great result," he said, in conclusion, "to the honour of the Y.M.C.A. and to the glory of the Master whom we serve."

Mr. Crane seconded the motion, and in the course of his remarks, he quoted from a letter he had received from a soldier at the front. "Take this for your inspiration," the soldier wrote: "The fellows over here are worth all you can do for them." (Loud applause.)

The Lord Mayor moved,—"That the meeting desires to record its sense of high appreciation of the generous response by the general public of New South Wales to the 'Red Triangle' appeal." It was, he said, a result of which they all ought to feel very proud. But it was not more than the Y.M.C.A. deserved. (Applause.) He had been greatly struck with the wonderful organisation by those citizens who had taken the matter in hand, and he considered that the splendid result achieved was largely due to this fact. He paid a high tribute to the work of Mr. Allard.

The motion was seconded by Lieutenant-Colonel Stacey, who recently returned from the front. There was no question, he said, of the work that the Y.M.C.A. was doing in the war, and any returned soldier would tell them of it. The officers of this great organisation were actually working under shell-fire, and exposed themselves to all sorts of risks. "I believe," he said, "that this war has done more to make the Y.M.C.A. known and appreciated than a hundreds years of peace." (Applause.) Concluding, he urged them to send the very best men they could to the front.

The motion was carried with enthusiasm.

VOLUNTARYISM.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Director of Recruiting (Mr. D. Mackinnon) referring this evening to the statement of the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) to business men, in which Mr. Hughes declared that in our present circumstances the voluntary system was the best way to get recruits, said those who advocated compulsory service to-day were a hindrance to recruiting. The main business was to get a steady flow of recruits. While asking those who advocated the principle of compulsory service to sink the issue, they also asked those who conscientiously believed in voluntaryism to give their effort their whole-hearted support. To get seven thousand men a month was not beyond their powers. Last month New South Wales enlisted more than 1900 men, which was about 400 under that State's quota. We had been averaging nearly 5000 a month under most discouraging circumstances for seven months. This contribution could be easily maintained. It was a question whether Australia should be again plunged into a bitter political contest, the issue of which was uncertain, and the consequences of which were so grave for the sake of 2000 a month.

NEW ABATTOIRS.

BUTCHERS ALARMED.

A large deputation waited on the Acting Premier yesterday, introduced by Mr. A. E. Hunt, M.L.C., to protest on behalf of the primary producers, stock owners, and carcase butchers about the charges made for slaughtering at the new State abattoirs at Homebush. Members of the deputation repeated the charge of slowing down recently made against the slaughtermen. While their output of cattle at Glebe Island had been 17 head per man, per day, it was now only 10. The extra accommodation charges brought the cost to the carcase butchers from three-farthings per head at Glebe Island to 3d per head at Homebush, while the total increased cost per head of cattle killed was from 2s 6d at Glebe Island to 10s 11d per head at Homebush. They asked for an immediate revision of the charges and the reconstitution of the Meat Industry Board from among practical men.

Mr. Fuller told the deputation that much of their trouble was due to the fact that whenever the slaughtermen struck the butchers gave in to them. He would, however, take all the facts submitted into consideration, consult the Board, and refer the whole matter to the Cabinet.

COAL BOARD TO RESUME.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The ballot which was taken by the miners to decide whether or not they would accept Mr. Justice Edmunds' decision on the Richmon Main dispute and the agreement arrived at for the Rothbury colliery, has resulted in favour of the adoption of both.

It is understood that the Federal Coal Board will sit in Newcastle on Monday week. The difficulty has apparently been overcome, the executive officers of the Colliery Employees' Federation will not say whether anything is about to be done to alter the rules, so that the decisions given by Mr. Justice Edmunds will not have to be referred to the district lodges to ballot on and decide whether they shall be accepted.

SHEARERS' STRIKE.

CHARLEVILLE (Q.), Friday.

A meeting of strikers here to-day appointed two delegates to meet the executive of the Transport Union to discuss matters in connection with the strike. It is stated that the strike is likely to assume serious proportions.

FEDERAL SESSION.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST DISORDER.

MR. HUGHES ON UNION PARASITES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Following on the disturbance in the House of Representatives yesterday, when a number of women, headed by Miss Adela Pankhurst, attempted to storm the House and demand work, every step was taken to-day to prevent the entry into the building of any of those who were concerned in yesterday's demonstration. All the entrances were strongly guarded by the police.

A large crowd gathered at the main entrance, and before 11 o'clock made one attempt to force an entry, but the police and officials of Parliament successfully prevented them.

Immediately on the opening of the House of Representatives Mr. Frank Brennan (Victoria) asked the Speaker whether he had issued instructions to the Sergeant-at-Arms to prevent the admission to the building of certain persons, even though they possessed tickets distributed to them by members, and containing the name of the Speaker.

The Speaker said, in consequence of the disturbance in the House on the previous day, he had issued instructions that no persons who were engaged in the disturbance were to be admitted during the sittings. (Ministerial cheers.) He had taken other steps to prevent any further unseemly disturbances.

Mr. Mathews (Victoria) desired to know if he had the same privileges as some other members, and if so why two of his constituents had been refused admission, even though in possession of cards of admission.

Other Opposition members also asked similar questions, and the Speaker reiterated his statements.

Numerous interjections came from the Opposition, despite the calls from the Speaker for order, and eventually Mr. Fenton (Victoria) was named.

The Prime Minister urged the member to make amends and Mr. Fenton apologised.

The leader of the Opposition (Mr. Tudor) then moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the unemployed question and the high cost of living.

COST OF LIVING.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes), in reply, said the motion would afford the House an opportunity of discussing one of the phases of this dreadful war. It would enable them to drive home to all sorts and conditions of men in the community what were, and must be, the consequences of this struggle. This country had much to be thankful for if they compared themselves with the conditions of their fellow-beings in Belgium. Not one word had been heard from these men on the opposite side on the piteous appeal made by the Belgian Commissioner, M. Van der Velde. He was ready to do anything to relieve distress if any distress existed. It ought not to exist. The Government would go on with all works at its disposal. The erection of wheat silos and storage for flour would be gone on with. There was some conflict of opinion among the unions regarding shipbuilding, but he was fairly confident that before long they would be proceeding with the shipbuilding industry. This would absorb all the ironworkers concerned. Yesterday he was struck by the paucity of practical suggestions for relieving unemployment. One of these was to manufacture ammunition. These people went about the country talking about peace, yet they came down with the suggestion to manufacture explosives to destroy more life. He excluded those who really wanted employment from the censure. The financial position of the States and the Commonwealth was quite abnormal. The supply of money was cut off, and it was impossible to borrow money anywhere. The necessity for economy was obvious, but money was being circulated more freely in Australia to-day than in any other period. They wanted new industries developed. In order to do so it would be necessary to turn over a new industrial leaf. He referred to the continuous stoppages in various industries. The coal industry was a type. They established a tribunal which gave the men all they asked for, yet it was impossible for the Coal Miners' Federation to show that the men have worked continuously. The industry had not stopped altogether, but first one lodge stopped, then another, and so on until the effect was a general stoppage. The effect on the coal industry was deplorable. Why, the men had threatened to stop because the Government was having stacks of coal piled up, yet the members for Hunter and Newcastle had asked him to provide employment for miners, and he had given orders for coal. The Government was asked to launch out with new industries. While they had a motion for the adjournment of the House to discuss unemployment there was a great strike in New South Wales, not against private employers, not against sweated conditions or low wages, but a strike against the introduction of the card system. On this system he would say nothing, for he knew nothing of the merits or the demerits of it. He wanted to lay it down as the basis of industrial health that there must be continuity of industrial operations. Why should the men, capitalists, or the Government, launch out with new industries, and take risks such as they saw at the present time?

PARASITES OF THE UNIONS.

Hardly a day went by without a complete stoppage of work on some wharf in Australia. The British Government wanted meat, and two vessels were loading at Newcastle and Brisbane. The men refused after a certain hour unless they were paid in excess of the minimum rate. He asked the unionists of Australia whether this was a sensible way to carry on their business? Ninety-five per cent. of the men were anxious for work, and the other five would not work even if dynamite were placed under them. They were the parasites of the unions, who attended every meeting, and if a man rose to favour an opposition principle to them he was called a scab and a blackleg. Such men were an absolute curse to Australia. As to high prices, he did not retract one word he had said against the men who had exploited the people of Australia. They were the people who mouthed about patriotism, and at the same time filled their pockets.

Mr. Blakeley (N.S.W.): Well, what are you going to do about them?

Mr. Hughes: I am not going to mince my words in regard to them. They are a disgrace to the class to which they belong. Both are a curse to the country, and the sooner they are out of it the better for the welfare of the country. I would like to deport them both. I don't believe there is any actual want in Melbourne, but if there is any, means will be found to afford relief.

The Minister for the Navy, Mr. Cook, said that it was a damnable "go slow" policy which had been adopted by some unions that was the cause of much unemployment. This policy had been adopted by some men at Cockatoo Island, and the excavation work which had previously cost the Government 12s 6d a cubic yard only recently had cost them 29/.

After further discussion the motion lapsed.

Mr. Wallace (N.S.W.) asked the Minister for Customs whether, in view of the loss of the steamer Waitotara by fire in the Pacific, the Government would take steps to see that cargo of an inflammable nature was not stowed adjacent to or near the stokehole, as it was alleged that the Waitotara loaded copra in the side bunkers at Suva.

The Minister replied that the Commonwealth Government had no control over the stowage of cargo outside Australian waters.

Replying to Mr. John Thomson (N.S.W.), the Assistant Minister, Mr. Groom, said that a conference of the Commonwealth and State Taxation officers had been held with a view to submitting suggestions for uniform taxation laws. It was anticipated that the report would shortly be submitted to the House.

Answering Mr. Higgs (Q.), the Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, said that the Central Wool Committee, which was administering the wool scheme under the direction of the Government, was consulted as to the details of the agreements entered into by the Government with Messrs. Whiddon Bros., Ltd., and the Colonial Wool Combing and Weaving Company in regard to the manufacture, sale, and export of wool tops. He signed the agreements on behalf of the Government, and he would lay on the table as soon as possible a complete copy of the agreements.

The Prime Minister informed Mr. Riley (N.S.W.) that the agreement clearly indicated that the profits made by the Colonial Wool Combing and Weaving Company must be invested in the extensions of the plant and the conduct of the business.

The Railways Bill was further considered in committee. Clause 53, which provides for appeals by officers, was amended to enable the Appeal Board to take evidence on oath, and to vary any punishment inflicted by the Commissioner on an officer of the service. Clause 55, dealing with temporary employment, was deleted. It was provided that all by-laws should be laid on the table of both Houses of Parliament.

The clause enabling the Commissioner to conduct a liquor bar on the train was omitted at the instance of the Minister, who stated he had not been able to submit the request of a deputation to the Gabinet. If the Cabinet agreed to the clause it would be inserted later; if they did not, it would disappear from the bill.

A new clause was inserted, giving the Commissioner power to lease land to railway employees for residential purposes.

The leader of the Opposition sought to bring all railway servants under the Commonwealth Arbitration Act. This was opposed by Sir William Irvine (Vic.).

It was pointed out by the Minister for Works and Railways, Mr. Watt, that the railway employees were already provided for under the Public Service Act, and there was really no necessity for the amendment; he would, however, consult with the Cabinet, and if it were found the men were not provided for he would have a clause included when the bill was in the Senate. The amendment was withdrawn, and the bill read a third time.

The House, at 4.45 p.m., adjourned till Wednesday next.

ANZAC BUFFET MATINEE.

ABOUT £700 REALISED.

Thanks to the volatile energy of Miss Ada Reeve, and to the briskly decided character of the auctioneering directed by Mr. W. A. Little, yesterday's matinee at the Tivoli Theatre left pleasant memories behind it. At the end of the afternoon the Attorney-General (Mr. D. R. Hall, M.L.A.) related, in the course of a speech of congratulation and thanks, that Miss Reeve's daughter in London left school at the age of 16 in order to do her bit for the war. Having learnt to manage a motor car, she took the place of a motor 'bus driver, and whilst he went to the front she earned his wages, and had for two years handed them over week by week to his wife. (Cheers.) They might well say that patriotism ran in the Ada Reeve family. (Cheers.)

Miss Ada Reeve, in reply, caused uproarious laughter by asking "whether it was fair, or tactful, just as she was posing for professional purposes as a two-year-old, to remind all Sydney that she had a daughter of 18?" As for thanks, she needed none whilst she could feel she was helping to keep going the Australian boys' club, but she had overflowing gratitude for all departments of the Tivoli, from Mr. H. D. McIntosh and managers to artists and honorary auctioneers, for making the whole affair such a success. She felt sure that the crowded house before her would be delighted to learn that the bookings and door receipts, and all sales and all else, would realise between £600 and £700. (Enthusiasm.) Though she was leaving Sydney on Sunday, she did not even yet despair of the needed £5000. (Cheers.)

Apart from the matinee programme, the stage sales were on an unusually comprehensive scale, occupying nearly two hours and a half. Miss Reeve began by drawing the raffle for the pendant, to which £37 had been subscribed, and it fell to No. 580, Mrs. Beryl Ireland, Beulah Flats. Mr. Kennedy Allen, whose humorous sallies were smartly sustained throughout, drew the camisole raffle, won by Mrs. Adams. The little kewpie-bride fell to No. 87, Miss Elkin; and the handkerchief sachet to No. 79, Miss Dorothy Brunton. The big doll exhibited at the American Bag Store realised £72 in tickets, and was won by No. 1686, Margaret Vicars, of Lheitenham. The gollywog was taken by Mrs. Wright with No. 226.

Mr. W. A. Little and Miss Reeve, assisted at intervals by Miss Marie Tempest and Miss Dorothy Brunton, then began the auctioneering of scores of articles of every possible character. The letter sent by an English volunteer from the French front in 1870 by balloon-post fetched £5; and Miss Tempest secured the same sum for a black Pomeranian. A tablecloth, embroidered by Ada Reeve and autographed by Mme. Melba ("the edging goes all round it, and the centre's in the middle," remarked the wit of the stage-party), was bought for £12 12s. A pot of quince jelly "made by a soldier's mother" was sold and resold to Mr. Little, Mrs. Harry Rickards, Miss Brunton, Miss Reeve, and Mr. M'Intosh twice, at £5, £3, £3 10s, £3 three times, and finally remained with some generous spirit who had persistently bid £2 10s. Total £23.

A brindle bull pup with a pedigree guaranteed by Mr. Greene, the noted judge of that breed, was sold to Mr. Jones, returned soldier, in the front stalls, for £16; and Mr. M'Intosh bought a Pekingese puppy for £15 15s, and released it, when it again fetched £15 15s, and ultimately was retained by Mrs. Jack Campbell. Miss Reeve's ribband, taken by a sailor on H.M.A.S. Sydney from a German tar on the Emden, fetched £5 5s. Silver-mounted pipes donated by Mrs. Rickards were sold at £5 5s to the giver, £5 5s to Miss Brunton, and £4 4s to Mr. Catt; total, £14 14s. Miss Reeve and Mr. Little bid against each other for Miss Brunton's silver-framed portrait, and it fell to the lady at £10 10s. In return, the dainty musical comedy soprano paid £12 12s for Miss Reeve's portrait, the two transactions being sealed by the audience with cheers and laughter. A miniature on ivory of Ada Reeve, painted by Mrs. Ireland, eventually ran up to 25 guineas, whereupon Miss Brunton consented to celebrate the success with a song. It took the melodious form of "I Never Knew," with Harry Jacobs as pianist, and for some minutes all hands were busy picking up the shower of silver coins which greeted the effort.

Messrs. Highland and Smith gave a "Savanola" phonograph (catalogued at 40 guineas), and after it had worked off songs by Miss Reeve, and at her request, "just to show the difference," by Caruso, bidding was brisk until it fell to Mr. Greene at £36 15s. A bag, given by Mr. Thos. White, a blinded soldier, was sold thrice for £5 5s each time. A doll's undergarment, found in the ruins of a French village, and alluded to by Miss Reeve, amidst convulsions of merriment, as "a pair of doll's ahems," fetched £6 6s. Mrs. T. H. Kelly bought a lace tablecloth, given by David Jones, Ltd., for £15 15s. A live ram was sold and resold seven times between £6 6s and £2 2s, and after totalling £23 2s was (more or less) led away by Mr. Reid at £3 3s. Mr. Freidman, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Jack Campbell, Mrs. Harrison, and Mrs. Drew frequently bid, and Mr. McIntosh accumulated quite a curiosity shop as time wore on. A "Roll of Honour," designed and donated by E. Harris, of Annandale, fetched £4 and £3 10s, and an historic map of Gallipoli, signed by several score Anzacs, £5 5s.

The official grand total was ultimately quoted at £700.

BARCALDINE, Friday.

I.W.W. delegates arrived in the town yesterday and called a meeting of labourers. The proceedings lasted all the afternoon. The men were advised to go to New South Wales, where, it was said, there was plenty of work. The result would be to force the pastoralists to concede all their demands, as no labour would be available for shearing. On a vote 68 were in favour of sticking out, and 42 against. It is reported that a camp will be formed here for those preferring to stay. Business people are disgusted at the men being so easily led to reverse their decision of Tuesday to declare the strike off.

RAILWAY UNION'S AWARD.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Inquiries made to-day go to show that the Queensland Railway Union is determined to reach what it regards as a satisfactory understanding respecting the payment of the new award rates to members of the unions only.

LATE COMMERCIAL.

TASMANIAN PRODUCE.

LAUNCESTON, Friday.

The steamer Taviuni left Devonport for Sydney to-night with 11,086 bags of potatoes, 2410 bags of turnips, 566 bags of peas, 48 cases of apples, and potatoes. The transhipments are 154 bags for Queensland, and 481 bags for Newcastle.

WAR ANNIVERSARY.

TO-DAY'S COMMEMORATION.

"On this the third anniversary of the declaration of a righteous war the citizens place on record their inflexible determination to continue to a victorious end the struggle for the maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice which are the common and sacred cause of the Allies."

Three years ago to-day Great Britain declared war on Germany. The anniversary will be commemorated throughout the State. The principal function will be a meeting in the Sydney Town Hall at 11 a.m. The Lieutenant Governor (Sir William Cullen), the Acting Premier (Mr. G. W. Fuller), and the leader of the State Opposition (Mr. John Storey) will speak in support of the above resolution. At a suitable hour similar gatherings will be held in the various municipalities and shires.

There will be a five minutes' stoppage of work in the Public departments, starting at 10.30 a.m. Trains and trams in the metropolitan and suburban area will cease running for half a minute from 10.30 a.m.

At noon a recruiting rally will be held in Martin-place. Professor Macintyre, Mr. J. C. L. Fitzpatrick (Acting State Treasurer), Mr. J. C. Garland, M.L.C. (Solicitor-General), Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Miss Grace Scobie are announced as the speakers. To-night, at 8 o'clock, in addition to speeches in Martin-place by Lieut. Nicholls, Sergeant Salisbury, M.M., and Gunner Hood, there is to be an exhibition of bombs by Mr. White. Mrs. J. C. Leete will sing a recruiting song.

On account of the curtailment of the railway service, and the difficulty that might be experienced in securing the necessary railway accommodation for bringing troops from Menangle and Liverpool to take part in the proposed parade and presentation of medals to-day, the authorities have decided to postpone these functions to a date to be decided upon.

At 3.30 to-day Mr. F. Flowers (President of the Legislative Council) will unveil a roll of honour on the railway station at Rhodes. The residents of the Rhodes district will hold a patriotic celebration in the marquee which has been erected near the station.

On Sunday there will be a special service at St. Andrew's Cathedral at 11 o'clock a.m. A large portion of the nave will be reserved for soldiers. The Dean of Sydney will be the preacher. The musical portion of the service will be of an appropriate character.

In a circular letter which has been forwarded to Presbyterian ministers the Moderator of the State Presbyterian Assembly (Right Rev. John Paterson) states:—"It is not necessary for me to impress upon you the gravity of the position in which the Empire stands, for you must all be fully conscious of it. Yet the community at large seems strangely heedless of it, and goes on its way very much as if there was no occasion for anxiety. I therefore pray you to urge your people to humble themselves before God, and to cease not day and night to intercede with Him on behalf of our brave defenders that their courage fail not; and our rulers that they may be wisely guided in all things; and the people that they accept their full share of responsibility individually and collectively; and that in His mercy He may grant unto us a speedy, righteous, and abiding peace."

There is to be a military Church parade by the Senior Cadets of North Sydney, Mosman, and Neutral Bay. The march will be from the Reserve, North Sydney, to St. Clement's Church, Mosman. Two bands will be in attendance. Returned soldiers are invited to fall in. The starting time, from the Ernest-street Drill Hall, for the North Sydney and Neutral Bay section, is 10 a.m.

Special services will be held at the Ashfield Presbyterian Church, when a tablet to the memory of the late Lieut. Kenneth Ball will be unveiled. The Mayor and aldermen have accepted an invitation to be present, as also the local militia.

MILLIONS CLUB LUNCHEON.

"We in Australia are determined to stand by the Empire to the end in this great war, and the rulers of the Empire are as determined to-day to see this war through to a successful issue as at the beginning."

The foregoing words of Mr. John Garland, M.L.C., were warmly applauded at a luncheon held by the Millions Club yesterday in commemoration of the anniversary of Britain's declaration of war. Mr. Arthur Rickard presided, and the company included the Lord Mayor (Alderman Meagher), the Minister for Justice (Mr. Garland), the Speaker (Mr. J. J. Cohen), the Acting Treasurer (Mr. Fitzpatrick), the United States Consul (Mr. Brittain), the Consul-General for Japan (M. Shimizu), the Consul for Belgium (M. Watteeuw), Sir William M'Millan, Sir Albert Gould, Mr. H. D. M'Intosh, M.L.C.

Mr. Garland moved the following resolution:—"That this meeting of business men heartily endorses the determination of the rulers of the Empire to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion, and thus secure peace and liberty for all the world."

"If we are going to continue to exist," said Mr. Garland, "success in this war is absolutely essential. We are fighting for all the ideals that lie close to our hearts, we are fighting for the cause of liberty, we are fighting for freedom, we are fighting for democracy itself." Mr. Garland referred to the prediction of the late Lord Kitchener as to the duration of the war, and the army he had built up to cope with the need. History would vindicate Lord Kitchener's memory, and show what Britain really owed to him. This was a long war, and much blood and treasure had been spent. "Unless the expenditure of blood and treasure is to be useless," said Mr. Garland, "we must win through. Cost what it may, that must be done. But to end this war with anything but a peace satisfactory to the Allies would mean that all this treasure and blood would have been expended in vain. The one prize which will repay this tremendous sacrifice is that this should be the last of wars. (Applause.) If that ideal is brought about, then all we have sacrificed and all we have suffered will not have been in vain."

The Lord Mayor, in supporting the resolution, said that time would only more strongly cement the determination of the British to see this matter through to the bitter end. Detailing the causes of the war and its progress, Alderman Meagher paid a special tribute to the part of Belgium, and his reference to the presence of the Belgian Consul, M. Watteeuw, was heartily applauded. They wanted peace with honour, he said, not peace at any price. "We don't want any of the poisonous dope that has been sprinkled in Russia to get any scope for its operations in Australia," said Mr. Meagher, and added that many of the pacificists would be better inside a concentration camp. "After all, I admire a German who would fight, but I don't admire a Briton who won't fight," he declared. When he heard pacificism preached he did not know whether to class the pacificist as a serpent or a goose—an enemy agent or a weak dupe. He hoped for a peace that would render Germany impotent for ever to harass humanity, and would leave the British Empire greater than ever. (Applause.)

Sir William McMillan said that if it were not for Britain's declaration of August 4, 1914, it was just possible that there might be no British nation to-day. The Empire to-day was more solidly cemented than ever by ties of blood and comradeship.

The motion was enthusiastically carried.

Mr. J. J. Cohen moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, and the gathering concluded with cheers for the King.

THE NEED FOR MEN.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for the Navy, Mr. Cook, this evening referred to the war anniversary in the following terms:—"After three years of this great world war of liberation, we pause to take a brief survey, and this is what we find. The war is for us at least as righteous and justifiable as when we began it. Our obligation to pursue it to the end has increased as the fateful days have passed. Our enemies are still on the soil of our allies, from which we have sworn to dislodge them. The tide of battle turns at last in our favour, but the need for men is greater than ever. Myriad voices from sacred graves call to us through the blood and mist of the years to complete the task they have left undone. Let us gird up our loins, and consecrate ourselves afresh to the holy cause. We declare that while the enemy is on the soil of our allies we will never lay down our arms. We can win; let us will mightily so to do.

WAR CHEST APPEAL.

Mr. Ross Gore, hon. organiser of the War Chest Day appeal (Friday, September 28), advises that the Australian Jockey Club has opened the fund with a contribution of £2000.

WAR ANNIVERSARY PARADE.

Brigadier-General Lee, State Commandant, stated yesterday afternoon that it was proposed to have a march of the troops through the city in connection with the third anniversary of the war. It had now been decided to postpone the procession on account of the strike, as the Railway Commissioners had notified him they would be unable to run special trains to convey the troops. There was to have been presentation of medals in the Domain, his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor having consented to make the presentations. The General also added that it was probable that week-end leave trains would be discontinued.

CASE UNDER FISHERIES ACT.

HOBART, Friday.

At the City Police Court yesterday Mr. W. O. Wise, P.M., delivered judgment in an interesting case under the Fisheries Act.

Francis John Littlejohn and John Billson, Hobart fishermen, and crew of the fishing vessel Volito, were charged with illegally fishing with crayfish pots at Schoutens' Passage on July 6. Both defendants were found guilty, and fined £3 and 11s 3d costs.

John Rae, the registered owner of the Volito, then answered an information that Littlejohn and Billson, having illegally fished with crayfish pots, the boat, dinghy, gear, and furniture were forfeited, and became the property of the Commissioners of Fisheries. Defendant pleaded not guilty.

After hearing argument the magistrate said he had no alternative, and must decide for forfeiture, but the Commissioners of Fisheries could attach any penalty or any conditions they thought fit. He hoped counsel for defendant would now be able to get a decision on the matter from the Supreme Court, because it was of such importance and the value of the boat was so great that the case could not rest there.

The boat is valued at £600.

GALVANISED IRON SHORTAGE.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

PROTECTING THE CONSUMER.

The new Act relating to weights and measures came into operation last year, but some of its more important provisions were not operative till July 1 of the present year.

The difference between the old Act and the new Act is that under the new Act and regulations provision is made to ensure that the purchaser shall receive the weight or the measure for which he asks and pays. Under the old law it was largely a matter of seeing that the weighing and measuring appliances were accurate. Providing that traders kept their appliances accurate, they could weigh or measure in any way they desired. Under the old law only the fool had weighing or measuring appliances inaccurate. The cunning man kept his appliances accurate, but used them wrongly. In framing the regulations it would appear that every effort has been made to deal fairly with the manufacturers of goods and to prevent any hampering of trade, always keeping in mind, however, the main object of the Act, which is to ensure that the purchaser shall actually receive what he orders and pays for.

Though the Act came into force on July 1, 1916, section 25 was not operative till a year later—viz., July 1 of this year. That section provides that no person shall sell by retail any article by weight or measure unless by net weight or measure; that every person delivering to any purchaser at any place other than the premises of the seller any article so sold shall deliver an invoice or delivery note showing the net weight or measure of such article, except as regards bread or any article weighed or measured at the premises of the purchaser and certain exemptions by regulation. This is a very necessary provision. It might easily happen that a butcher, for instance, in delivering meat, may neglect to state the weight at the time of delivery, and when he comes to make up his books, make a weight different to what he delivered. Trials have shown that in such cases as have occurred the forgetfulness has always been to the detriment of the purchaser, never to the detriment of the vendor. The householder who has meat delivered is now able to compel a check being furnished. Another provision is that if any article is sold in a package, there must be legibly written or printed upon the outside of the package the net weight or measure, or upon a label firmly attached. The regulations provide the size of the type. This provision, however, does not apply to articles weighed or measured before or at the time of sale in the presence of the purchaser. Certain articles are also exempted by regulation from this provision, and where articles are subject to variation by reason of climatic influences it is sufficient if the label or package bear the inscription "net weight when packed." The regulations dealing with the manner of marking weights do not come into effect till August 1, 1918.

A seller has sufficient defence against misdescription of weight or measure on a package if he is able to produce a written guarantee from the person from whom he purchased the article that the weight or measure printed on the label or package is correct, and that he sold it in the same state as it was when purchased by him; on condition that the person giving the guarantee is a resident of the State, or, if a company, has a registered office in the State.

The sale of fuel seems at all times and in all places to have been a peculiar temptation to fraud. This has been recognised in all countries, and the regulation of fuel sales is among the earliest attempts to regulate sales in order to protect the purchaser. Many complaints are made regarding the provisions of the new Act in this regard. The provision of the regulations most objected to is that the vehicle delivering coal by retail, that is, by hundredweights, must carry a weighing machine, in order that the purchaser may be enabled to ascertain whether he is obtaining what he will be charged for. The objectors altogether overlook the fact that the carrying of a weighing machine was compulsory under the old Act. But under the old Act it was only the purchaser who could prosecute. Under the new Act the inspectors can stop a cart on its way and compel the carter to produce a certificate of weight, and the fact of carrying fuel on a vehicle is proof that such wood or coal has been sold or is for sale. Experience has shown that in a large number of cases short weight fuel has been delivered. Bags must contain one cwt., or if the quantity is less than one cwt. it shall be in sacks of 56lb, 28lb, or 14lb. Another provision of the regulations is that each bag of coal containing less than one hundredweight must have a tag, on which is legibly impressed the amount of coal which the bag contains, and if the weight is below that stated on the tag, there is a liability to prosecution. The sale of coal in bulk, of course, cannot be treated by these methods. The purchaser here has the right to demand that the coal shall be taken to a public weighbridge and there weighed. If the weight is short of the representation, then a prosecution may follow. If the weight is correct then the purchaser must pay for the delay caused by the cart or lorry, as the case may be, travelling to and from the weighbridge. The provision is all to the advantage of the seller, since, unless a man were absolutely certain that the coal was under weight, he would not demand a weighing. Yet it is impracticable to make any other provision. If the buyer did not assume some responsibility, most of the coal bought in bulk would be sent to the weighbridge with great loss of time, leading to additional expenses, which, in the long run, would only be thrown back to the purchaser. It is probable, however, that the risk of having coal sent to the weighbridge will have some effect in deterring the would-be dishonest trader.

Public weighbridges in future will be more strictly under control. It is not unknown for public weighbridge certificates to be produced without any weighing on such a machine having been performed. To do such weighing is a nuisance to the carter, and delays his work. What is easier for him than to come to an arrangement with the man in charge of the weighbridge to give him certificates as he asks for them. It might also be lucrative to the attendant at the weighbridge. Now, in addition to the public weighbridge being licensed, the man in charge must also be licensed, and the licensing authority will also be the authority having power to revoke the licensee, and the license may be revoked on the proof of any wrong-doing in the way of misrepresenting weights or the action of weighing.

Another necessary reform is the standardisation of weighed or measured goods in packages. This standardisation, however, will not come into force until 12 months after the close of the war, as the traders have represented to the authorities that it is difficult to obtain any goods in packages from abroad at present, and to enforce these regulations would practically destroy any chance of obtaining the goods. The principle, however, may be explained. A trader in the future will not be allowed to sell certain packed goods in any sized packet he desires. The packets must conform to a standard. In weight, for instance, there will be the quarter-ounce packet, the half-ounce packet, one-ounce packet, the two-ounce packet, the quarter-pound, the half-pound, the three-quartar pound packet, and the pound packet, the pound and a half packet, and packets in multiples of one pound.

There will be no 3¾oz packet to represent ¼lb, or 14oz to represent a pound, and the common practice of concealing from the purchaser an advance in price by reducing recognised quantities, will no longer be permissible, and will render of no avail the manipulation of tins by increasing the bottom rim, and of bottles by raising the bottoms and indenting the sides to conceal the reduction of their contents, and with the advent of the standardisation regulations the 7oz packet of tea and the 27oz tin of jam will be a thing of the past. It is often said that the housewife is shrewd in buying. Traders know differently. They know that it is price alone which appeals to her. She would rather buy a seven-ounce packet of tea for /10 than an eight-ounce packet for /11. The seven-ounce packet looks half a pound, and, therefore, she believes it the cheaper.

URGENT FOREIGN MAIL.

The British Government is apparently ensuring that those who will pay for the privilege will have their foreign mail delivered with some certainty. The Postmaster-General of the United Kingdom has extended to all district and branch post-offices in the London area the system already in operation at the General Post Office, London, and at many head post-offices outside London, whereby the sender of a letter for the United States, for Portugal, or for any neutral country in Europe or America, may secure that it shall be treated as specially urgent by the Post-office and the military censors by affixing stamps to the value of half-a-crown in addition to the ordinary postage and handing it over at the counter.

WAR-TIME PROFITS TAX.

NO AVERAGING OF PROFITS.

One important point in which the latest Wartime Profits Bill differs from its predecessor is in the omission of the section of the first bill, which allowed a rebate of tax when in a year succeeding the payment of tax the profits were not up to the pre-war standard. Clause 10 of the first bill proposed:—

> Where a person proves in any account period ending after June 30, 1915, his profits have not reached the point which involves liability to wartime profits tax or that he has sustained a loss in his business, he shall be entitled (a) to repayment of such amount paid by him as wartime profits tax in respect of any previous accounting period; (b) to set off against any wartime profits tax payable by him in respect of any succeeding accounting period during the war such an amount as will make the total amount of wartime profits tax paid by him during the whole period accord with his profits or losses during that period.

That clause is altogether omitted in the new bill. Such a clause would cover the case of a large profit one year and diminishing profits in succeeding year, and would make the Act equitable. The only clause in the new bill which resembles the deleted clause relates solely to losses, not to diminished profits. That is sub-clause 11 of clause 14. The sub-clause sets out:—

> When in the case of any business, (a) the net result of the business since the first of the three selected pre-war trade years and up to the end of the accounting period, immediately preceding that upon which the current assessment is being made has shown a loss; and (b) any part of the profits of the current accounting period has been applied in extinction of that loss; then in estimating the profits, a deduction shall be allowed equal to the amount of profit so applied.

The omission of the provisions of the first bill will press hardly on businesses with fluctuating profits and on businesses which, in order to obtain their true returns, are compelled to average their annual returns over a series of years. It will mean that when profits are greater than the average, the tax will operate, and when profits are less than the average no allowance will be made to bring them up to the average, unless a loss has actually been made, and profit in a succeeding accounting period is actually applied for the extinction of that loss. It may be that the point has been overlooked by the Federal Treasurer and his advisers. It is well worth consideration.

"Carpenter."—Three-fourth of £300 each. Probably a greater percentage than 10 per cent. will be allowed, as the capital is so small. "Perplexed."—No, unless you make a business of dealing in land.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Chemicals were again active yesterday, and considering the quantity of stocks available there were some fair sales. Caustic soda, unbranded, though of English make, was worth £55 for 70/72, and the same strength, branded, sold at £56. American 76 per cent. changed hands at £60, and English of the same strength, with the maker's name on, sold at £60. English 98 per cent. had business at £75. Bi-carb. of soda was strongly held. A parcel in cwts sold at £30 a ton. The acids were steady. A little tartaric changed hands at 3/7 between houses. A sale of cream of tartar, French, 95 per cent., was made at 2/9½ net. For 99 per cent. 2/11, usual terms, was asked. Citric acid was slow at 3/9. A keen inquiry was made for borax, and a little was let out at £66. Boracic was up to £140. A large shipment of Japanese carbide arrived during the week. Japanese sulphur was worth £14/10/, and Sicilian £16/10/. G rosin was available at £32/10/.

In metals there were buyers for as much wire as could be offered. Galvanised No. 8 sold at £52, and No. 10 at £55. Telegraph wire, No. 12 guage, sold at £60. A little No. 14 gauge was obtained at £57/10/. Parcel transactions in Iowa pattern barbed wire were on the basis of £45 and £46/10/ for No. 12 and 14 respectively. Black No. 8 was bought from Brisbane at £47/10/, f.o.b., equal to £50 in store in Sydney. Plaster was worth 50/ a cask.

Parcel business in grocery lines was of moderate extent. Salmon had an active inquiry. For Red Alaska one agency quoted new season's at 47/ a case, c.i.f. and e., but the rate was generally considered too high by merchants, and no business was done. Between houses pinks sold at 11/, medium red 12/6, and choice red 13/6 per doz., all for 1lb talls. Sales of Horseshoe were made at 14/. A handy parcel of Norwegian sardines (quarters) was placed at 7/. For indent tapioca was quoted at 30/6, c.i.f. and e. Peppers were steady at late rates. Clothes pegs were worth 7/ per five-gross box. Morton's 5oz olive oil was quoted in parcels at 9/6 a dozen. New Zealand sheep's tongues had business in a fair-sized line, 12oz tins at 18/, and 1lb tins at 21/.

Farmers bought cornsacks this week in larger quantities than in previous weeks, but still freer buying immediately is needful if they desire to find themselves not left out in the cold when the harvest is upon them. They would do well to take the advice of Senator Russell to purchase at once, as the Government here has no control over Calcutta prices. Cornsacks for season's delivery were worth 9/4 plus war risk, Calcutta quoted the equivalent of 9/6½ in store without taking into account war risk. A little business was done for cornsacks on spot at 9/6. Woolpacks on spot were worth 4/, and for forward delivery 4/ plus war risk. Branbags sold at 8/3, prompt delivery.

At a meeting of the jute trade sectional committee of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, Mr. C. J. Henty was elected chairman of that section for the ensuing 12 months.

AMERICAN STEEL SITUATION.

Practically all of our imported iron and steel is coming from the United States. What the situation was in the United States as regards iron products a month ago—and it is certainly no better to-day—is revealed by a cursory study of the American files. A couple of months previously it was thought that only a small fraction of the total steel production would be required for Government use. Since then the quantity required has been placed at higher and higher figures, and at the end of June it was estimated that between 40 and 50 per cent. of the country's steel production would be required for Government buying, which would mean 13 to 17 million tons of steel withdrawn from the American market during the succeeding 12 months. For instance, fully a million tons of shipping steel will be required in connection with the plan for standardised ship construction. The Government has placed orders for 10,000 tons of steel sheets for camp requirements; steel for 70,000 motor trucks; for 100,000 freight waggons, for 34,000 consort waggons. Thousands of field guns are wanted, and there is an insatiable demand for marine and aeroplane engines. Inland transportation of both raw materials and finished products is most troublesome, and prices of all raw materials have advanced enormously; for example, coke is now quoted at over £2/2/1 per ton as compared with a normal price of 6/4 to 8/5. It is usually calculated that it takes two tons of coke to make one ton of pig iron, so that at the price at the end of June the fuel cost alone of a ton of pig iron would be £4 4s 3d. As a matter of fact, buyers are not inquiring as to price, but only as to delivery. Price is a very minor consideration.

As to tinplates, it is expected that the Government will put an embargo on export, but there were practically no tinplates for sale except a few small parcels in second hands. Orders had been placed at £3/13/8 per base box of 107lb net, strapped, New York.

MAIZE HIGHER.

A firmer market ruled for maize in Sussex-street yesterday, and yellow grain commanded 3/9. The white variety was rather scarce, and very few sales were booked on account of the small quantity offering. The shipment from the North Coast was light.

RAILWAY MARKET.

VALUES AGAIN FIRMER.

MINING.

"DEEPS" BOOMING.

Strong buyers for Edna May Deep Levels appeared on the Sydney Exchange yesterday, and the "bears" at no time had any say in operations. The market was not without its fluctuations, and, although at the luncheon adjournment sales had been booked at up to 15/3, on the afternoon 'Change prices receded to 15/. Later, towards closing time, the shares were pushed upward strongly to 15/10½ cash, an advance of 2/1½ on the day. Other Westonia stocks participated in a similar rise. Centrals recovered /6 to 20/6, and Consols, con., closed at 14/6, compared with 13/11 on the previous day. The parent stock moved up 1/ to 43/6 for delivery in six weeks.

The prospects of a decreased output from the Barrier mines, through the threatened abolition of the night shift, depressed Broken Hill stocks in general. Weaker quotations were listed for the chief propositions, and business was recorded in only the lower-priced shares. Increased attention was paid to the Malayan tin enterprises. Deebook, on the strength of an improved yield of 23 tons of tin oxide, advanced /3 to 10/3. Ronpibon eased to 17/11, but Kampong commanded 41/, an increase of /6. Ratruts continue to weaken, owing to the disappointing return of only 24 tons, as against 35 tons for the previous month.

The leaching plant produced 9.315 tons copper in precipitate. The second shift is now established, but trouble is being experienced in obtaining skilled miners and mill hands.

The output of the Vegetable Creek tin mine for the week ended July 26 was 4½ tons.

The Black Range West Gold-mining Company (Sandstone, W.A.) has purchased leases 4B and 5B from the Black Range Mining Co. These leases adjoin the Black Range West leases on the east.

The mine manager of the Hawkin's Hill Reward gold mine wires as follows:—"For the fortnight ended July 28 crushed 120 tons for 112oz gold."

Development work continues at the South mine from the 825ft to the 1270ft levels. Two of the west crosscuts in the latter level are still in sulphides. Diamond drilling continues at the 1270ft level. Considerable surface work is in progress, and a start has been made with the excavations for the new power house.

TIN YIELDS.

The manager of the Ratrut Basin Tin Dredging Company cabled that for the month of July the dredge ran 420 hours, turning over 50,000 cubic yards for a recovery of 24 tons. The dredge was stopped for rebushing buckets and changing tumbler. The estimated value of the month's output was £3033, and the estimated cost £1050, thus leaving an estimated profit of £2983. As compared with the favourable return of 35 tons recorded last month, the above yield is a trifle disappointing. The average of the ground passed over was 1.071b. The average value of the product would be a little over £126 per ton.

The Deebook dredge recovered 23 tons of tin oxide from 72,000 cubic yards in a run of 592 hours. At the moderate basis of £125 per ton the output would be worth £2875.

OYSTER CULTURE.

A deputation of oyster lessees waited upon the Chief Secretary (Mr. G. W. Fuller), yesterday, to ask for the absolute right of renewal of expiring leases, and the appointment of an expert in conjunction with the Department's officer for the work of re-appraisement. It was also asked that the size of marketable oysters be reduced.

The Minister gave a sympathetic reply, saying that he would endeavour to see what could be done in the direction of carrying out the proposals.

SHORTAGE OF PAPER.

WELLINGTON, Thursday.

The Government has arranged for the shipment of 1000 tons of printing paper for New Zealand.

AFTER THREE YEARS.

How the war has affected the stock and share market during its course of three years from August 4, 1914, may be gathered from the appended comparison of sales. With the exception of Sydney Ferries, the steamship companies' shares show considerable increases. The most notable case is that of the Union Steamship Company, which has almost trebled in market value since the outbreak of war, owing to the amalgamation with the P. and O. Company. Bank shares, though not up to the pre-war standard, have held firm during the past 12 months. The general investment market is on a firmer footing, chiefly owing to the stimulus imparted to buying by the payment made on the acquired wheat harvests, and wool clips. Despite the recent industrial trouble, coal shares command enhanced prices.

The following table affords an interesting comparison:—

RETURNED SOLDIER FINED.

John Fahey, a returned soldier, was fined £25 with 6s costs, in default three months' imprisonment, at the Central Police Court yesterday. Fahey was charged with having disposed of a horse, van, and harness and other articles, valued at £41 without the written consent of the State War Council, contrary to a regulation of the War Precautions Act.

Defendant pleaded guilty.

Mr. Hayes, of the Crown Law Department, explained that defendant applied to the trustees of the Repatriation Fund, and received £41 to buy a rabbiter's outfit. Subsequently, he placed it in the hands of an auctioneer for disposal, and the outfit was duly sold.

RIFLE CLUBS' UNION.

At the annual meeting of the Metropolitan District Rifle Clubs' Union, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:—President, Mr. T. L. Westbrook; vice-president, Mr. R. Coombes; hon. treasurer, Mr. W. J. Robinson; hon. secretary, Mr. P. H. Partridge; auditors, Messrs. T. Finlay and F. A. Grace.

TRADE UNION GOVERNMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At Goulburn we have advice that a general strike is imminent, and the country is to suffer severely for the fact that the Railway Commissioners have introduced a system by which the labour value of any man or party of men may be in some degree estimated. I wish to show that this is one of the main principles in unionism, which are, firstly, that no man may be allowed to do more than the minimum amount of work and expose the slacker; secondly, that if a slacker is dismissed the man who exposed him must strike to have him reinstated; thirdly, that after a strike there shall be no victimisation, which means that the strike leaders must be allowed their former position, without any censure. For seven years the Government has submitted to all this, and now it is proposed to infringe these rules. Some time ago, through your columns, I expressed a strong opinion that if the employer will make one stand against this tyranny he can break it up. It is only necessary to say to the strike leaders, "If you leave your work you will not be again employed." Carry this out, though it may give some trouble at first. But the country is at the back of the Government and the Railway Commissioners. It is declared that civilians will fill all the gaps, and even if the service was under-manned for a time the loss would be small compared to the stagnation and loss of trade and income that is constantly the case. The evil is increasing. Our railways are not paying, and the cost is increasing by leaps and bounds. Increased awards follow every strike, and a serious industrial trouble must follow. Men must be paid award rates for a very much reduced amount of labour, and employers will not be found much longer. Where is such a state of things in any other country?

THE PROBLEM OF RECRUITING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It was with great interest that I read your sub-leader in the July 19 issue of your paper. It put the unfairness of the voluntary system, as it concerns the youth of our country, so convincingly that doubtless other parents besides your correspondent "S. P. W." will feel that you have written on a subject which is of great importance at this present time. The boys who are so patriotic and ready to give their lives, if need be, for love of home and country do not so often possess the necessary stamina, physical and moral endurance, to withstand the strain of war. I have heard a medical man say that he did not consider a boy of 18 sufficiently "set," and also, on good authority, I heard that a well-known Sydney doctor gave the same opinion, and added he "would not let a boy of his go before he was 20." Would it not be possible to get the opinions of several doctors, who could speak from experience and observation on this matter? Boys of 18 are shipped to England for training, though we cannot let sentiment play too big a part at this time; yet the fact remains that if ill or wounded our boys are far beyond our reach, unlike the English boys, who, when wounded, are often sent to England, and so are in touch with their parents. It will be a sorry thing in the years to come to have to record, "Australia sent her youths to fight, and men capable of fighting to the best advantage were permitted to stay at home."

Wagga, July 23. I am, etc., MATER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Re Mr. Gerald R. Campbell's and "Disgusted's" letters in your columns on "Conscription," the following petition was sent to the Prime Minister, through Sir William Irvine, on June 14, under registered cover, to which no reply has yet been received:—

"Sir,—We, your petitioners, respectfully pray that you will remit the question of 'conscription' for military service abroad to the people of the Commonwealth of Australia by referendum through the ballot-box at the earliest date possible, for the following reasons: Because the Empire's need for man power in the fighting line is now greater than when the question of conscription was remitted to the people in October last. Because our brave boys at the front, who have borne the burdens of war so long and so gloriously, need relief and support. And because, if the purpose for which so many of our brave men have sacrificed their lives, their limbs, and their health is to be attained, it is necessary that every man Australia can spare shall go to their support with the least possible delay, and we, your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray—(then follow the signatures)."

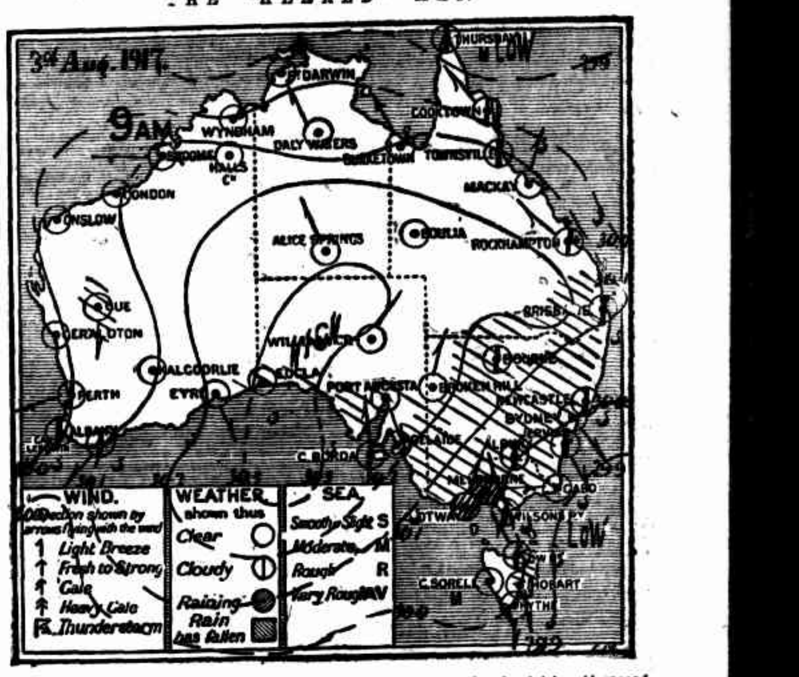
I am thankful to say that every single son I have has gone to the front, and I can say with truth that I would rather see them all die there, doing their duty to their King and country, than have them stay at home and shirk their duty. Mr. Hughes, in his anxiety to pacify the anti-conscriptionists and to reassure them, to catch votes for the National Government, turned his back on the truly loyal population of Australia for the enemies of Australia and the Empire, and for that reason thousands who would favour conscription will have no more to do with voluntary enlistment till the burdens and obligations of citizenship are more justly and equitably allotted.

I am, etc.,

EUGENE F. RUDDER.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The energetic Antarctic disturbance, which has been responsible for fairly widespread rains, but mostly of a light character, has now moved to the south-east, and is at present centrally situated over the southern Tasman Sea.

The high pressure, which yesterday was so energetic, and promised cold weather generally, has lost a good deal of energy, and at present it is centrally situated over the Bight.

There are evidences of another disturbance to the west of the Leeuwin.

Moonsoonal conditions are still showing over the northern part of the continent, but so far have not resulted in any rain worth mentioning. A few showers may be expected along the slopes and in the extreme south-east, otherwise fine, with cold south-westerly winds.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally, strong, south-westerlies in Bight; freshening south-east on Queensland coast; elsewhere smooth to moderate; squally around the Leeuwin.

FRIENDLY SOCIETY SOLDIERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—My letter in your issue of Saturday relative to the above did not in the least suggest that the proposal submitted by the deputation to the Acting Premier was a repudiation of the promises made by friendly societies to our members on active service, but a protest against the proposed method of keeping those promises. I ask Mr. Sands, as president of the F.S.A., is it not a fact that one friendly society at least is treating their soldier members' contributions as book debts? If so, this, under the Friendly Society Act, is illegal. Was not the object of the deputation practically to ask the Government to legalise their illegal act? The question arises, is the Registrar cognisant of their method? And if so, why does he allow it? There is surely no tacit understanding in such a serious matter. Mr. Sands pleads for "some consideration to our present members." There is no justification in so managing our finances that when the war is over and normal times exist we should have to pay increased contributions through such an unbusinesslike proposition. We know from past experiences that once an increase takes place it is no easy matter to secure a reduction. If members pay (as in most societies they do, and loyally, too) a levy to a special fund for the purpose in question, they know that such levy is only for the duration of the war; but not so with increased contributions, which must certainly follow if the Government allows the scheme asked for. At the end of each quinquennial period we have looked for decreased contributions or increased benefits, a possibility always held out by our leaders, but the scheme they are now advocating will not give us the remotest chance of such, but rather the opposite—that of increased contributions and decreased benefits. Again, Mr. Sands states: "That almost if not every society is worth 20s in the £ in their combined sick and funeral funds." That may be so, yet only recently in one society, if not more, the Registrar has insisted upon increased contributions to the sick fund, which must show that 20s in the £ is required in each individual fund, notwithstanding the amalgamation of the two funds. It is surely the wisest course to use our funds for the purpose they are allowed by law, and meet the liabilities of our soldier members' contributions by contributing to a special fund for whatever period necessary. Further, he says: "There will be no material depreciation of funds." (No, only to the extent of roughly £22,000 per year, sick and funeral contributions, on account of 17,000 members). If no depreciation, why did the Registrar limit the amount of the surplus funds he allowed to be used during the first few months of the war? Sir, if our friendly society leaders cannot lead us in paths of sound finance, then it is to be hoped that Mr. Fuller will protect us from any wayside financial burdens that we shall surely have to carry in the future. Mr. Sands refers to "winning the war." We are out to win the war if we pay our soldier brothers' contributions in a true manly spirit, and not pass them on to those of our brothers who, when they return, will find they have to pay increased contributions, as a sort of thanksgiving offering, for what we have had the credit of doing for them.

I am, etc.,

A FRIENDLY SOCIETY MEMBER.

SPORTSMEN'S UNIT.

Owing to the strike, the usual weekly Sunday night recruiting rally and free entertainment at the Stadium has been postponed. This decision was arrived at owing to the lack of tramway facilities.

The organisers of the Third Sportsmen's Reinforcement Unit state that its success is now assured, and the type of men being secured is highly gratifying, most satisfactory reports being received from the camp concerning them. There are very few vacancies left for the 3rd unit, but sportsmen who volunteer for it will still be welcomed. The officers who have been allotted to take away the 3rd unit, Lieutenants F. W. Fifield and Joseph Lecky, are both keen sportsmen. Lieutenant Fifield, a native of Mount M'Donald, near Cowra, is 29 years of age. He has been actively interested in various branches of sport, principally in Rugby, in which he played five-eighth for the Southern Union, having represented the union in Sydney for country week. He has also played for Wagga, Adelong, Tumut, and Gundagai. Both he and Lieutenant Lecky qualified for commissions at Duntroon. The latter is a farmer, of Oaks, near Camden, and is 30 years of age. He is a married man, and is a native of Belfast, Ireland. He was educated at Bath College, England, and Sydney University. Since his arrival in Australia in 1903 he has proved himself adept at tennis, cricket, and rowing, and in 1912 he joined the Killara Golf Club. His brother is Major C. S. Lecky, D.S.O., of Lane Cove, who was recently wounded, and he is himself well known on the Lane Cove River.

YOUTHFUL RECRUITS.

A public presentation was made at Braidwood to Mr. D. Kemp and Mr. Glen Harris, who occupied positions in the Bank of New South Wales and the Commercial Bank respectively, and who are both only 18 years of age, on their enlistment. Mr. Harris is an only son, and Mr. Kemp is the fourth of his family to enlist, one having fallen in France. The Rev. W. D. Kennedy, in the course of the proceedings, said it seemed a great shame that two lads just entering manhood should have to shoulder such a responsibility. He had not asked them to go, but he had asked older men, and their answer had been that they could not go as they might get hurt.

Captain C. G. Templeman, of the A.A.M.C., has left for the front. He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Templeman, of Tarana, Randwick, and previous to enlisting he was a resident medical officer of Royal Prince Alfred Hospital.

He was at the landing on Gallipoli, and was invalided home after being buried with seven comrades at Lone Pine. He left Australia again in November, 1916, and was at Bullecourt. Two brothers are serving with the A.I.F.

BATHURST.—The death has occurred suddenly of Mr. James Apps, at the age of 72. He was one of Bathurst's well-known residents.

BOMBALA.—Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Rev. Mr. Marshall, Presbyterian minister, died in the hospital from double pneumonia. Deceased had only resided here a few weeks, Mr. Marshall having received a call to Bombala from Molong, where he resided a number of years.

BROKEN HILL.—The rails on the Menindie section of the Broken Hill-Condobolin railway are now laid to within a short distance of the proposed Menindie Station site.

CAMDEN.—A working bee, organised by the Camden Political Labour League, pruned and dug one acre and a half of vineyard for Mrs. M. Hindes, whose two sons enlisted for the front. Eighty persons participated in the work.

DUBBO.—Mr. W. Moffatt, aged 86 years, has passed away. Deceased, who resided in the district for over half a century, was one of the first aldermen elected to the Dubbo Municipal Council. He also was Mayor of the borough for a term. He built and owned the first flourmill.

FORBES.—The death has occurred at her residence, Cremorne, of Mrs. Sarah J. Brooke, relict of the late William Brooke, of Forbes, in her 84th year. The late Mrs. Brooke came to Forbes with her husband (who was editor and proprietor of the "Forbes Times") in 1864, and resided here with her family till last year, when she removed to Cremorne. Mr. Brooke died in 1903.

GRENFELL.—The local Red Cross conducted a bazaar and sale of gifts, the proceeds to be divided between the Red Cross and War Chest funds. The ladies worked splendidly. Over £500 will be realised. The shire council dealt with a letter from the Lands Department, asking for local assistance and advice to the returned soldiers, regarding settlement on the land. Mr. John Murray, president of the shire, and for years manager of Iandra Estate, said he would willingly give a good deal of his time for the benefit of the returned soldiers free, and endeavour to make the scheme a success, if he were given some power of management.

GULGONG.—Mr. Robert William Heard, one of the oldest citizens of Gulgong, has died at the age of 68 years. He was a native of Parramatta, and came to Gulgong in the early 'Seventies, when the goldfield broke out, and when thousands of people came here in quest of gold, which was then being won in amazing quantities. He occupied the mayoral chair for over nine years and a half.

JUNEE.—Mr. R. B. Bell, town clerk for the past eight years at Junee, has been appointed town clerk at Narrandera.

LISMORE.—Mr. W. A. Blackstone, post and telegraph master here, who is retiring from the department after 46½ years' service, received a presentation from the staff.

LITHGOW.—A meeting of the Colliery Conciliation Committee was held at the Lithgow Courthouse to-day in regard to the working of western collieries. It has special reference to the deficient place question at the Vale of Clwydd colliery. Mr. C. J. Hibble was chairman, and Messrs. Pillans (president) and Gregory (secretary) are the employees' representatives; and Messrs. Mallett and Durie represent the employers.

Full time was worked this week at all the collieries except Oakey Park, which was idle yesterday. The stoppage at Oakey Park was due to a wheeler being asked to do water-bailing. He considered he had a right to keep on wheeling, and the lodge supported this attitude. The pit was working this morning.

MORUYA.—Mr. John Emmott, aged 77 years, senior partner of the firm of S. and W. Emmott, storekeeper, has died in Berry Hospital. Deceased had resided in the district for over 50 years, and was a member of the Land Board and Licensing Bench. NYNGAN.—Shearing is now in full swing throughout the district. So far no trouble has been experienced. The supply of labour, both shearers and shed hands, is in excess of the demand. A couple of loads of wool have already arrived at the local railway station. In nearly every case the shearing is by contract.

PEAK HILL.—The Allies' fair held during show week in aid of the local soldiers' comforts fund was a success, £500 being realised.

URANA.—The ballot for two soldiers' blocks of 800 acres each resulted:—Albert Fallshaw (Bondi), 1; Arthur West (Warren), 2; Colin Doone (Manly), 3.

WALCHA.—Mrs. Norton, relict of the late Edward Norton, of Tiara Station, has died after a brief illness, aged 83.

WELLINGTON.—The Director-General for Education received a deputation of citizens, who requested the establishment of a full High School at Wellington. A request was also made for a science room to be equipped, and for an Agricultural High School to be established, for which the council had granted 39 acres of suitable land in Junction Park. Mr. Board in his reply indicated that the school would be kept up to intermediate standard, but six other places had superior claims to Wellington. The matter of an agricultural school was one for the parents and boys themselves, and if there were sufficient pupils there was a good chance of a school being established. He would place the claims regarding a science room before the Minister.

WEST MAITLAND.—Mr. W. R. Cooper, manager of the Maitland branch of the Commercial Banking Company of Sydney for the past 6½ years, is about to retire from the bank's service.

WOLLONGONG.—The Rev. J. Pool has been appointed to the charge of the Kurrajong parish, and the rector, the Rev. Mr. King, who was previously connected with the Wollongong parish, will take up duty as chaplain.

YASS.—Mr. B. Chapman, who was one of the earliest carriers in the district, arriving in Yass at the age of 15, died at North Yass at the age of 65. He was born at Windsor.

CASUALTIES.

Charles Henry Dobson, aged 21, a packer, living in Edinburgh-road, Marrickville, was found last night in his room with a bullet wound in the right side of his head, and a revolver nearby. He was conveyed to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital by the Civil Ambulance in a most critical condition.

Daniel Collins, aged 4, was playing on the balcony at his residence at Amy-street, Erskineville, yesterday, when he clambered over the railing and fell a distance of 20 feet. He was conveyed by the Newtown District Ambulance to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital, suffering from a fractured base of the skull. He died soon after admission.

The shipping fatality which occurred on July 30 on a steamer berthed at Miller's Point, when William John Fisher lost his life, was inquired into yesterday by the City Coroner. William Christie, chief officer, said that deceased, who was a seaman, was working on a staging suspended at the side of the ship. A bale of wool fell from a sling, striking him in its descent. Deceased was flung into the water, but a winchman named Thiering lowered himself into the water, and landed him on to a lighter. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

MAILS TO THE EAST.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With so many of our troops in Egypt and Palestine at the present time, it would be a great benefit to the public out here, comprising the numerous friends and relations of those troops, if more detailed information were published from time to time re the despatch of mails to Egypt. (Those troops engaged at Salonica, too, to whom Australians want to write, would come under the above category.) Prior to the discontinuance of the P. and O. service we all knew a fortnightly service existed to Egypt, via Suez, and could write by that with certainty. As things are at present, we are in the dark as to when and how to post our mail matter to Egypt. It is an accepted fact how eagerly our boys at the front look forward to their mail, and how much "mail day" and the receipt of home news means to them. Consequently, this request for definite information re posting to Egypt, such information to be made through the columns of your paper as early as possible, to enable country readers who may not get their "S.M. Herald" for one or two days, or even three days, after its publication, to be in time with their letters for their relatives on the Egyptian front.

I am, etc.,

PATRIOTIC FUNDS.

RED CROSS.

At a meeting of the executive of the committee of the Red Cross Society correspondence was received from the Commissioner (Col. Murdoch) giving detailed accounts of the work in England, which included a letter from M. Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador in London, thanking the division for the contribution of £2500 to the French Red Cross. M. Cambon says: "I assure you that it will be expended to the great benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers, and in a way which will enable my fellow-countrymen to still more realise the friendship of your great country."

In connection with a report from the Information Bureau, it was stated that over 60,000 letters go from that depot each year, involving a great amount of clerical work.

Mrs. McArthur Onslow was appointed director of the Book Depot, to fill the vacancy caused by Mrs. Aronson's resignation.

The hon. secretary of the Red Cross Old Linen Depot, at the Town Hall, writes stating that an impression is abroad that the depot has been closed, but this is incorrect.

THE WAR CHEST.

A committee of residents along the North Shore have arranged a village fair, to be held at Killara, on September 8, the proceeds of which will go towards augmenting the funds of the War Chest. The golf links are being transformed into a most attractive village, wherein there will be stalls, shows, and entertainments of all kinds. An extensive electric lighting scheme has been devised, and a section of the entertainment will represent a miniature Hampstead Heath. The fair will be opened by Lady Cullen.

On Wednesday next, at 2.30 p.m., at North Sydney High School, Falcon-street, an address will be given by Mr. H. E. Budden, War Chest Commissioner. On August 29, at North Sydney Oval, will be held the annual sports gathering of the school, when parents and friends of the boys attending this school propose to hold a refreshment tent, the proceeds from which will be devoted to the funds of the War Chest.

It is stated that this represents in the case of molybdenite an increased price of £47 16s per ton, 96 per cent. ore, and as regards wolfram and scheelite an increase of £17 1s 8d per ton, 70 per cent. ore.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The metropolitan fixture for this afternoon is a trotting meeting at Epping, under the management of the New South Wales Trotting Club; the winter meeting of the Newcastle Jockey Club takes place at Broadmeadow; the Australian Steeplechase reunion of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club opens at Caulfield; and the Albion Park Jockey Club caters for Brisbane racegoers.

Nominations for the half dozen events on the card for the second August meeting of the Rosehill Racing Club on the 18th inst. are invited by the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, up to 4 p.m. on Monday. The prize money totals 700 sovs.

The Australian Trotting Club is in the field with the programme for the reunion to be held on the Victoria Park Racecourse on Monday next, the 6th inst. The prize money totals £310, distributed over six events, the best endowed of which is the A.J.C. Handicap of 70 sovs. Entries close with the secretary, Mr. H. Cobcroft, at 6 p.m. to-morrow, and the adjustments are promised two hours later.

Metropolitan sportsmen who intend to assist at the meeting of the Newcastle Jockey Club on the Broadmeadow course this afternoon can reach the convincing ground by the trains leaving the Central Railway Station at 6.40, 8.15, 8.35, and 9.30 a.m., while the return trip can be made by the trains coming south at 4.45 and 6.35 p.m. Trams run between the Newcastle railway station and the racecourse. The track is excellent going, and good sport seems assured.

The New South Wales Trotting Club holds a reunion this afternoon on the Epping racecourse, and an interesting programme is down for discussion. The track is good going, and large fields may be expected, while horses of good quality are engaged. The customary transit service via George-street to the racecourse gates will be in vogue, and the first race is timed to start at 12.30 p.m.

Caulfield will this afternoon be the rendezvous for Victorian sportsmen, and the interesting bill of fare includes the Australian Hurdle Race, in which the best talent in Australia is engaged. There are 18 acceptors, and should all face the barrier the field will be the largest since 1912, when Uxbridge won in a field of 19. Lord Grey heads the list with 11st 11lb, and with that he has been left with a winning chance; and, with 7lb less, Van Homreigh should run well. Coronatus is not attractive nor is Obi, but Merunqua can be trusted to give a good account of himself; and the same remark applies to Pistolier and Bundong. King Mostyn seems to have a fair show with 10st 2lb, and Nick-a-jack has none the worst of the fixtures. The finale may be fought out among Lord Grey, Van Homreigh, Merunqua, Pistolier, Bundong, and King Mostyn, and the judge may declare for Bundong, Merunqua, and King Mostyn, unless separated by Pistolier.

"J.R." (Strathfield).—Wee Laddie started in the second division of the Encourage Stakes, at Rosebery, at 5 to 2 against.

"L.E.H." (Randwick): Lillyman did not have a mount in either race.

Owing to the decision of the Railway Department not to run racecourse trains the August meeting of the Warwick Farm Racing Club has been indefinitely postponed.

C. Barden, who was injured in the racecourse accident at Canterbury Park last Saturday, still remains in an unconscious condition at the Helenie Private Hospital, Randwick.

Messrs. Wm. Inglis and Son announce the dispersal of Mr. A. D. Playfair's Ribbonwood stud, North Richmond, on Friday next, the 10th instant, when a number of high-class trotting stock, including the famous sire, Ribbonwood, who has held the R.A.S. championship for many years; the stallion, Winn Alto, Oro Alto, and Orowood; also brood mares and foals and young colts and fillies by Ribbonwood and Winn Alto. Coad, Frank Hutchens, Faunce Allman, hon. treasurer, and G. de Cairos Rego, hon. secretary) of the Musical Association of New South Wales received members at their "at home" at Farmer's last night. Three songs for voice and piano, composed by W. Arundel Orchard as a setting of poems by troubadours of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, "Serenade," "Winter," and the "Return of Summer," and rendered by Messrs. Emil Sussmilch and Frank Hutchens, were well calculated to interest an audience consisting entirely of cultivated listeners. The chief event was the faithfully-studied performance of Maurice Ravel's "Trio for Pianoforte and Strings" by Messrs. Hutchens, Monk, and Gladstone Bell ('cello). This complex work was prefaced by a brief address from Mr. Bradley, who drew attention to its ultra modernity. The trio was, indeed, "up to the minute," as one might say, and even to those who had examined the score in advance was not always fully comprehended. What place such a work would occupy in the music of the future, whether any at all or one of importance, must remain a matter for speculation. Mr. Bradley continued his interesting remarks by quoting a description of a composition from "The Chesterian" (London) as an example of the reductio ad absurdum in the direction indicated. At the end of the concert the members adjourned to the tea room.

LATE MR. J. E. DAVIES.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Eagar Davies, of Penarth, Woolwich, which took place at the Waverley Cemetery, was attended by a large number of friends and fellow-officers of the Lands Department. Amongst those present were the Misses Davies (sisters), Mr. and Mrs. George Davies (uncle and aunt), Mr. Harry Davies (cousin), Mrs. Frank Smith, Mr. J. E. O'Dwyer (Chief Clerk, Department of Lands, representing Mr. A. J. Hare, Under-Secretary for Lands), Mr. J. G. Briggs (representing the Chief Accountant's Branch), Mr. C. Edwards (draughtsman in charge Metropolitan Survey Commission), Mr. G. E. Brodie (acting accountant, Department of Lands), Mr. P. F. Casey, Mr. M. S. Hawthorne, Mr. E. O'Connor, Mr. A. Walker, Mr. J. G. Biggar (sub-accountant, Department of Lands).

RAILWAY FARES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of to-day we are told that the Executive Council has adopted a "ten per cent. increase in railway passenger fares," as recommended by the Railway Commissioners. There follow two tables giving the present fares and proposed new fares for what may be called suburban distances, viz., from one to fifteen miles. Now, the ticket that is used far more frequently than any other is the second-class return, so that it is a fair thing to examine the new rates as they operate on this ticket. This examination shows that the new rates are both inequitable and unjust, ranging from no increase at all for some stations up to as much as 33 per cent., which last is, I would reasonably suggest, "going it a bit too strong," even for a Railway Commissioner, who, we may presume, never got any training in elementary arithmetic in his sad young boyhood. I append a table for the Milson's Point line, showing (a) the mileage, (b) the present fare for second-class return ticket, (c) the proposed new fare, (d) the increase per cent., (e) the station affected, and (f) the most equitable fare on a 10 per cent. increase, assuming that halfpennies are not admissible:—

Mileage	Old fare.	New fare.	P.C. inc.	Station.	Equitable Fare.
1	2d	2d	0	Bay-road	2d
2	4d	4d	0	Wollstonecraft	4d
3	5d	6d	20	St. Leonards	6d
4	6d	6d	0	Artarmon	7d
5	7d	8d	14	Chatswood	8d
6	8d	10d	25	Roseville	9d
7	9d	1/	33	Lindfield, Killara	10d
8	10d	1/	20	Gordon	11d
9	11d	1/2	27	Pymble	1/
10	1/	1/2	17	Turramurra	1/1
11	1/1	1/4	23	Warrawee	1/2
12	1/2	1/4	14	Wahroonga, Waitara	1/3
13	1/3	1/6	20	Hornsby	1/4 or 1/5

Now, Sir, I submit that, if the Executive has only adopted as legal an increase of 10 per cent., then an increase of 33 per cent. is nothing short of a barefaced robbery of the public, and would not be tolerated for an instant if it were done by a private firm instead of a Government department. Unless the public as a whole keeps an eye on these departments, and rises in just wrath every time they try this kind of thing on, the burden will soon become intolerable. We will gladly pay the increase that is legally sanctioned if it will help to straighten out the State's finances, but we all object to being robbed, and I think that the people of St. Leonards, Roseville, Lindfield, Killara, Gordon, Pymble, Warrawee, and Hornsby, in being asked to pay 20 per cent. or more increase on present rates, are confronted with about as barefaced an attempt of this kind as has come under my notice for a very long time. Indeed, as a 20 per cent. increase has not been legally sanctioned, it would appear that we should all be legally within our rights in refusing to pay it. I would suggest that the municipalities and shire councils affected should take this matter up without delay, and bring pressure to bear upon their members of Parliament to get this manifest injustice righted without delay. This applies with equal force to all railway suburbs; I only took the Milson's Point line as an illustration.

I am, etc.,
Aug. 2. R. J. TILLYARD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The new fares on the railways have been gazetted, and these reveal some points which are omitted or not explained in the communiques from the Commissioners. The increases from Newtown to Homebush inclusive are:—

First-class return. Sydney to Newtown 1d, Stanmore 1d, Petersham 1d, Lewisham nil, Summer Hill nil, Ashfield 3d, Croydon 2d, Burwood 2d, Strathfield 2d, Homebush 2d.

Second-class. Sydney to Newtown nil, Stanmore 1d, Petersham 1d, Lewisham nil, Summer Hill nil, Ashfield 1d, Croydon 3d, Burwood 3d, Strathfield 3d, Homebush 3d.

The comparison is made by placing against the rates for the mileage given in the "Gazette" the rates for stations of the same mileage given in the latest time-table. What has taken place is this. As far as Summer Hill the first-class fares remain as before for the single journey and as far as Ashfield the second-class singles remain as before. Thereafter, the single fares are increased by 1d. Under the new rates the return fare will be exactly double of the new single fare. There is no concession for taking a return ticket. This explains why the first-class return fare has in one case cited above increased three-pence, and the second-class fare has increased by the same amount in two cases. The Ashfield first-return ticket has increased 33 1-3 per cent., a second return ticket to Burwood or Strathfield has also increased 33 1-3 per cent. The season tickets seem to have been uniformly increased.

I am, etc.,
TRAVELLER.

AMUSEMENTS.

CRITERION THEATRE.

Marie Tempest enters this evening upon the last six nights of her prosperous comedy season at the Criterion, where the star will make her farewell appearance in "Mary Goes First" next Friday. During this final week crowds of playgoers will doubtless enjoy Graham Browne's heart-felt delivery of "We've only a short while in this world; do let's be comfortable, do let's be happy!" Miss Tempest will shortly leave for Brisbane, followed by Adelaide and Perth.

THE CYRIL MAUDE SEASON.

Mr. Cyril Maude is now in Adelaide, where he enjoyed a Mayoral reception, at which he was welcomed by the Premier (Mr. A. H. Peake) and leading citizens. Dr. Melville Jay informed the gathering that 38 years ago, when he was surgeon on board the ship City of Adelaide, Mr. Maude was a passenger, and came under his care. Dr. Jay has practised in Adelaide ever since. When "Grumpy," the plan for which opens at Paling's on Monday, is produced at the Criterion next Saturday the cast will be as follows:—Andrew Bullivant, Cyril Maude; Ernest Heron, Herbert Ranson; Ruddock, Edward Lester; Jarvis, Frank Elliott; Isaac Wolf, Robert Avrton; Dr. Maclaren, Stephen Scanlan; Keble, F. Gatenby Bell; Merridew, Harry Sweeney; Dawson, H. H. Wallace; Virginia Bullivant, Dorothy Cumming; Mrs. Maclaren, Stella Payter; Susan, Betty Murray.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"Canary Cottage" will close a capital run of nine weeks next Friday night, after which Dorothy Brunton will initiate her farewell appearances, beginning next Saturday with a week of "High Jinks," in one of her best characters as Sylvia Dale. Chas. H. Workman and Field Fisher will again play leading parts, with Connie Ediss as the Adelaide Fontaine, Marie Eaton as Mrs. Thorne, Claude Bantock as the Lumber King, Alfred Frith as Colonel Slaughter, and William Greene as Rabelais. Plan opens at Paling's on Monday.

OPERA AT THE HIPPODROME.

The Gonsalez Italian grand opera season will close at the Hippodrome to-day with two performances, and though the attendances will doubtless be large, there will be room for all. In the afternoon "La Boheme" will be staged, and at night "Rigoletto" will be put up, with Messrs. Cappelli and Scamuzzi in the leading characters. Signor Cappelli will also sing "Spirto Gentil," from "La Favorita." Future plans are referred to in our Music and Drama column. The plans are at Nicholson's and at the theatre.

FARCE AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

There will be a matinee of that laughable piece, "A Little Bit of Fluff," at the Grand Opera House to-day (2.30), after which the Fuller management will announce the last six nights in order to produce "Fair and Warmer" next Saturday, with almost the same cast as originally played it at the Criterion. Dorothy Purdell, an English actress, will join the combination, which will again include Daisy Atherton, Percy Marmont, and Thomas A. Braidon, in the leading characters.

ADA REEVE'S FAREWELL.

Miss Ada Reeve will make her penultimate appearance at to-day's Tivoli matinee, and will bid farewell to Sydney theatregoers to-night. Her popularity and talents should make the occasion a memorable one. On Monday an entirely new programme will be presented at the holiday matinee, the star performer being Miss Billie Seaton, the American diseuse.

PALACE THEATRE.

An entirely new edition of "Look Who's Here" was issued at the Palace Theatre last night. Cecilia Gold, Ada Smart, Sydney Hollister, and Wylie Watson, supported by other anglers, are seen in a fishing scene. Sydney James, supported by the entire company, presents a new sketch entitled "A Costly Courtship." In addition, Mr. James appears in a character study of Wilkie Bard's "Watchman, What of the Night?" The Ideal Trio, under Jack Waller, reinforced by four pianos and the Purple Band, plays Tchaikowsky's 1812, preceded by a dramatic prologue, in which Jack Waller appears as Napoleon. Sydney James, G. W. Desmond, and Sydney Hollister appear as Three Giddy Curates in a song and whirlwind dance. Madeline Rossiter and G. W. Desmond submit an American buck dance. There will be a matinee to-day at 2 p.m.

THE CHERNIAVSKY FAREWELL.

The third term of the session commences on Monday next, and examination entries have to be made in this term. The programme will include the "Pastoral" Symphony of Beethoven, Mozart Concerto for Violin (Mr. W. J. Coad), and orchestra, and the Select Choir will render the Bach "Magnificat" with orchestra.

THE VERBRUGGHEN QUARTET.

Owing to the success of the Verbrugghen Classic Quartet in Melbourne, the season has been extended to include an extra concert this afternoon. The programme will consist of the Tchaikowsky Quartet, the Debussy Quartet, and the Cesar Franck Quintet, Mr. Goll being the solo pianist.

MOTORISTS' NARROW ESCAPE.

LITHGOW, Friday.

A resident of Lawson, named Wallace, and some friends, while motoring, had a narrow escape at Berghofer Pass. The party was returning from an outing and as they were turning a corner in their ascent of the pass the car skidded and dashed into a fence guarding the road. Wallace immediately turned off the power and applied the brake, arresting the car's progress just in time. The front wheels and portion of the car hung over the precipice. With a foot more projecting, most likely the car would have fallen into the gorge beneath. Some half-dozen cars were soon on the scene, and ropes having been fastened the car was drawn back to safety.

JAPANESE ATTACKS JUDGE.

TOWNSVILLE, Friday.

The Japanese servant, Masajiro, who attacked Mr. Justice Shand on Wednesday night, had been dismissed, but refused to go. He tripped Mr. Justice Shand, and beat his head on the floor. The disturbance was heard by Mr. Clancy, the caretaker of the Supreme Court. He ran in and pulled off Masajiro, who was pummelling Mr. Justice Shand's head. The Japanese severely bit Clancy's hand. Clancy's 13-year-old son joined in with a stick. He hit Masajiro over the head with the stick, and the latter ran away. He returned to the house later, and was arrested. It was fortunate that Clancy heard the noise, for Masajiro, who is a strong man, under 40 years of age, was attempting to strangle Mr. Justice Shand, who was removed to a hospital. He was bleeding profusely about the head, and suffering from shock.

At the police court Masajiro admitted that he assaulted Mr. Justice Shand by battering his head on the floor. He also tried to choke him, because he did not want to go away. It is believed that the man is partially insane.

MOTOR CAR ACCIDENTS.

CASINO, Friday.

Two motor car accidents occurred at Casino after the races yesterday afternoon. In trying to avoid colliding with a cab a car, driven by A. Innes, and loaded with passengers, struck the gutter with considerable force. One of the front wheels was broken off at the axle, and the near rear wheel smashed. All the occupants were thrown out and severely shaken, and had to receive medical treatment. Mr. C. Davidson was injured, but not seriously.

A lad named Shearer was knocked down by a car, and rendered unconscious. He was admitted to the Casino Hospital with severe abrasions on the face and legs.

BOGUS RETURNED SOLDIER.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

John Crimmons, 38, a labourer, at the police court, before Mr. [illegible], to-day, sentenced to six months' gaol, hard labour, on a charge of attempting to obtain by fraud from Sergeant-Major Desmond a railway pass to Brisbane. The evidence showed that the defendant went to the recruiting office yesterday, and said that he had belonged to the 2nd Battalion, and wanted a railway pass to go to Queensland. Defendant also stated that he was a returned soldier, and had been appointed a King's Sergeant. He had papers to that effect, and also possessed a returned soldier's badge. After evidence had been taken for the prosecution defendant said that he was travelling in a train, and was under the influence of liquor. Someone had taken his hat and coat, and had left a military coat and cap, which he took. The magistrate remarked that men like the accused were a source of danger to genuine soldiers, as they caused them to be suspected when they sought relief.

RICHMOND MAIN COAL STRIKE.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

Richmond Main was idle to-day, owing to a strike of the employees. The dispute arose over a skip which was yesterday derailed in the mine, and was off the rails when the men went into the colliery this morning. The miners contend that the manager would not pay them for replacing it on the lines, and work was not started.

WHEAT BOARD'S OVERDRAFT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Official figures made available to-day show that the bank overdraft of the Australian Wheat Board has increased, and that the amount was £5,632,000 on Monday. The responsibility of the four wheat-growing States for the amount was distributed as follows:—Victoria, £2,170,000; New South Wales, £1,721,000; South Australia, £1,391,000, and Western Australia, £350,000. From the sale of wheat overseas and locally the wheat pool has realised £24,477,000. With the exception of 972,000 bags shipped, and 2,922,000 bags sold locally, the whole of the 46,302,000 bags put into the 1916-17 pool is still held in Australia, in addition to 9,752,000 bags in hand from the 1915-16 pool.

CLERK'S CONVICTION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The case of David Flynn O'Donoghue, ex-clerk of the Navy Department, who was ordered to serve a sentence of imprisonment amounting in all to six years, was before the Court of Criminal Appeal to-day. O'Donoghue was convicted in May on three charges of obtaining money by false pretences. The conviction was upheld.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL RECORD BROKEN!

LOS ANGELES TO NEW YORK.

3296 MILES—7 DAYS 16 HOURS 16 MINUTES.

From the Pacific to the Atlantic, in Uncle Sam's War Despatch Trial Run, Alan Bedell, on a strictly stock HENDERSON Four-cylinder Motor Cycle, smashed "Cannon-ball" Baker's Famous Record by 3 days 19 hours 54 minutes. This is the fastest Trans-continental time ever attained by any one man on any form of vehicle. At the termination of this day-after-day battle with time the Four-cylinder Motor "droned" as smoothly as at the start of the long journey.

Alan T. Bedell, after finishing his record ride from coast to coast, wired as follows:—"The performance of the Four-cylinder HENDERSON was wonderful. I had not hoped to make the whole Trans-continental trip without at least some mechanical trouble; but, though it seems incredible, I was not delayed an instant by anything of this nature. There was absolutely no motor trouble of any kind."

This performance stamps the HENDERSON "FOUR" as absolutely

"MASTER OF THEM ALL."

A SAVING OF COSTLY PETROL.

PALMER CORD TYRES
PALMER CORD TYRES

Petrol is now so expensive that any means of economising it will surely be welcomed by the motorist. Palmer Cord Tyres economise petrol because of their scientific construction, which restrains air pressure without wasting engine-power. It has been carefully estimated and proved by actual comparative tests that their superiority over canvas-lined tyres gives 10 per cent. more distance per petrol gallon.
Palmer Cord Tyres do not contain canvas.

NEW CARS DEPRECIATE FROM 30 to 50 per cent. the first year. A good Second-hand Car, with a written guarantee, bought at the right price, is a profitable investment, that after years of service shows only a low depreciation, and is a much better proposition than a cheap new car. We have sold hundreds of cars all over the country, and we can refer you to satisfied clients who are using cars purchased from us up to 10 years ago. We have a number of the leading makes of cars that we have taken as part payment for new 6-cylinder cars at very reasonable prices. Some of these cars are only soiled. With these cars we can give a written guarantee as to their condition. Write to us, and we will send you full particulars. We do not buy Second-hand Cars, but can take your small car in part payment.

Mitchell

The Mitchell is the car which, on December 17 last, went from Sydney to Jenolan Caves, across the Blue Mountains, while sealed in high gear, under Press observation. No more trying test of a car has ever been made in Australia. No other make of car has ever paralleled this feat of the Mitchell. Isn't this the kind of car you want?—one which in performance measures up to your highest expectations?

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL
AMERICA.

PAIGE

AMERICA.

Most motor car manufacturers now-a-days can claim the term Reliability and Dependability for their products. To such perfection has the motor car industry grown, that these terms are only generalities, and a car to earn an original title must have something about it decidedly striking and decidedly worthy. At the recent New York Show in America, where over 100 makes of cars were exhibited, including all the leading lines, thousands of people became enthusiastic at the new, distinctive, features as the various makes were pointed out to them. No decision was expressed generally that any one car out-featured another, excepting in the case of the "Paige Motor Coy's" products. So unanimously was it agreed that the "Paige" was "The Most Beautiful Car in America" that it is now the recognised slogan for the "Paige" cars. A visit to our stores in Hay-street will convince anyone interested that this term is not an exaggeration. The beautiful body lines of the "Paige" cars, the finish, the upholstery, the quality of the leather, the shape of the radiator, the hood, the length of the wheel base, and its attractive appearance combined, had earned it the well-deserved title, "The Most Beautiful Car in America."

"THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA."

Can you conceive of anything you would rather have the public say and think about your Car? A car built upon the high ideals and enviable reputation of the Paige Coy. is destined to become a permanent success, and will endure so long as fair dealing and quality remain established factors of value in the Commercial World.
"PAIGE" PRICES:—2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8 Seaters, £495 to £795. Australian Bodies, £25 extra. Your used car taken in part payment. Half Down accepted on all Cars. Just a little extra, and you get a "Paige." Write for Art Catalogue.

ACCOUNTANCY.

Every office man should study Accountancy and win his Degree.

Accountancy is an interesting and valuable study, and offers great rewards for the comparatively small amount of time and money involved.

Our courses of Postal Lessons are unequalled. We are the only coaches who supply students with a complete course of Printed Lessons in all subjects. Our course consists of 60 Lessons in Bookkeeping, Accountancy, Auditing, and Commercial Law, and covers the syllabus completely for the New South Wales, Federal, Victorian, or Corporation Examinations, as held in this State.

We have passed 2500 candidates since 1897.

Last year ONE-FIFTH of the total candidates in Australia were coached by us.

There is no more effective and satisfactory way of obtaining your Degree than by studying with "H. and R."

Our fees are extremely reasonable, and we GUARANTEE PASSES.

We publish a "Guide to Accountancy," which contains the most complete information.

A copy will be sent free to every man who is desirous of improving his prospects in the business world. No student should enrol until he has read this book. Write for a free copy to-day.

MAKE YOUR DAUGHTER INDEPENDENT.

It is the duty of every parent, and at this time especially, to do this.

Every day we are sending out young Ladies as Private Secretaries, Shorthand-Typists, or Bookkeepers, and at the Government Examinations our Students are always in the front ranks.

Unfortunately, many girls are sent to Business Colleges, who are unsuited for a Commercial career. Our system is to ensure against any risk of failures by offering to examine and report on each case before admission. A vast experience has proved to us which type of girl is most successful, and we are anxious for parents to share this knowledge.

WE WANT STENOTYPE OPERATORS.

Like all machine ways which are the outcome of the pressing demands of business, the Stenotype opens up a new and certain channel of employment.

BUSINESS MEN ARE ASKING FOR STENOTYPISTS.

WE TRAIN YOU

in Stenotypy, and all subjects necessary for your business career, and when you are proficient we place you in a position.

"The machine way will always supplant the hand way when it means more speed and greater accuracy."

You know how the Linotype revolutionised the setting of type, and the typewriter, adding machine, cash register, and other modern office appliances have improved business methods. Now the wonderful Stenotype, the machine way in Shorthand, has come to revolutionise stenographic work and supersede the old and slower hand methods of shorthand.

Stenotypy is so simple that a child can learn to read the note. It is merely a short and interesting system of phonetic spelling PRINTED IN PLAIN TYPE LETTERS on a fascinating, noiseless little machine called the Stenotype.

STENOTYPY IS UNIVERSAL. Any Stenotypist can read the notes of any other Stenotypist, no matter how fast or how slowly they were written, by whom they were written, or when they were written. The ease with which the system can be learned, the speed and accuracy with which dictation may be recorded, the legibility of the notes, and the ease with which they may be transcribed is fast placing it in stenographic departments of business offices.

Send for a "FREE SPECIMEN LESSON" and our Booklet, "THE MACHINE WAY IN SHORTHAND."
